LEGISLATIVE MOVE TO STOP K. K. K.

WOMAN BEATEN IN ASYLUM

MRS. ROBERT ST. CLAIR AND HER BOY

She says the boy's grandparents in Laconia, N. H., didn't want the trouble of looking after him, and, as they objected to her seeing him often, she just took him from them and brought him to her Arlington home.

GETS LIFE FOR PART IN FATAL HOLDUP

Springfield, Nov. 29.—George E. Belanger, found guilty by a jury today of the murder of Wallace L. Weber, a storekeeper, on September 18, 1921, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Webster Thayer. Belanger was [illegible] charge and the [illegible] a life sentence.

Dubaime was a witness in the Belanger trial, testifying that he was induced by Belanger to hold up, rob and shoot Weber.

One juror saved Belanger from the electric chair. It was learned after the [illegible] was sentenced to [illegible] and [illegible] to the death chamber.

SWINDLER OF WOMEN JAILED

New York, Nov. 29.—Dr. Knute Arvid Emlind, who with Alfred Lindsay and Major Redondo Suttee, conducted a "Domino Club" partnership by means of which wealthy women were swindled out of large sums through bogus stock sales, today was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term.

ADMITS HE GAVE BABY HIS NAME

"I Did It to Shield My Sister From That Woman," Says Dorothy's Uncle

"I am not the husband of Mary Coakley. I never married Mary Coakley, either through the church or by common law practice. It is all a lie made up to blacken my reputation."

John D. Gardiner made this statement today to the Boston American. He is the uncle and would-be guardian of Dorothy Gordon, born inmate of McLean Insane Hospital.

Mary Coakley, former maid in the Gordon household, says he is the father of her child and deserted her and their child nine years ago.

Mary Coakley charges that Gardiner and she became man and wife about 1910. Records of the christening of her child bearing the name of Gardiner have been found in New York.

Gardiner today admitted that he attended the christening of the baby and that he had given the baby his name. He charges that he did this because the Coakley woman had been threatening his sister, Mrs. F. D. Gordon, and had promised to stop if he would give her child a name.

WAS SHIELDING SISTER.

"I suppose I was a fool to let myself fall into such a trap," said Gardiner, "but I was thinking only of my sister. She has suffered at the hands of the Coakley woman for years. Mary Coakley knew of certain facts that my sister did not want F. D. Gordon, father of Dorothy, to know.

"Mary also knew of the illegitimate birth of Dorothy. She threatened to tell Dorothy of her parentage and she threatened to tell Mr. Gordon the facts she knew about my sister. Holding this hammer over my sister's head, she forced my sister to support her for years.

"She wanted to give the child a name. She appealed to me to help her out. She promised if I would

Halts Navy Scrapping in Britain

London, Nov. 29 (by the Associated Press).—Great Britain will scrap no more warships under the Washington treaty, it was said this afternoon, unless [illegible] according to the insurance [illegible] or agreement to the limits of [illegible] signed by Myron T. Herrick.

Pitchfork Secretary to the Admiralty.

Asked who had ratified the treaty, Commander Monsell replied:

"The treaty has been ratified by the United States, Japan and this country, but not yet by France or Italy.

"So far as is known the United States and Japan have not disposed of ships, except, possibly obsolete ships that have been disposed of in ordinary course."

88-POUND PATIENT BLACK AND BLUE, SAYS SISTER

Holbrook, Nov. 29.—A story of Rose Largen, who is frail and worn down to only eighty pounds, being "restrained by force" until she was black and blue on head and face and bruised the length of her body while a temporary patient recently in Taunton Insane Hospital, was told today.

The story was told, with increasing indignation, by Rose's widowed sister and sole support, Mrs. Eva Harrington of this town.

Mrs. Harrington said that when she went to the hospital last Sunday, being uneasy about her sister, the hospital authorities argued against her seeing her sister. When she insisted she was shown into the hot bath room. To quote Mrs. Harrington this was the picture that confronted her.

"I found Rose strapped in a bathtub of steaming hot water.

"Both sides of her face were bruised black and blue. Her left eye was black, swollen and closed.

"Her arms and legs were

WIFE DECLARES SHE WILL KEEP HER BOY

"I don't know why they are making so much fuss because I took my own child; who has a better right to her son, than his mother?"

Thus spoke Mrs. Robert St. Clair at her home in Arlington today. She is accused of kidnaping her six-year-old boy from the home of his grandparents in Laconia, N. H. in a sensational race last Monday.

"His grandparents didn't want the trouble of looking after him and they objected to me seeing him every day. They thought it wasn't necessary

PONZI JUROR ILL; TRIAL IS HALTED

The trial of Charles Ponzi, "financial wizard," was abruptly halted for several hours today by the sudden illness of George Mathews, one of the jury.

His was stricken with indigestion while in the jury box. Judge Fosdick declared recess. As Mathews was walking to the jury room he partly collapsed.

Ponzi was pleading his case at the time.

Attorney-General Allen was a spectator today and listened closely to what Ponzi said.

Ponzi, with one hand in his pocket, spoke easily to the jurors. Opening his address, he said: "In February, 1920, I was solvent and after

HOLIDAY PARDON TO DEATH CAR DRIVER

A Thanksgiving pardon was granted today by Governor Cox and the Governor's Council to Albert P. Peach, of Springfield, serving a three to four years' sentence in Charlestown State Prison for manslaughter. Peach drove an auto that collided with a car in which Mrs. George Peck of Palmer was a passenger on Bliss Curve in Wilbraham, scene of seven fatal accidents. Mrs. Peck died from the injuries.

Peach had served a year and a half and had been a model prisoner.

Sixty other applications for Thanksgiving pardons were turned down.

ASKS RETURN OF ALIEN PROPERTIES

Washington, Nov. 29.—Return of approximately $0,000 small estate and properties seized during the war from aliens and held in trust by the alien property custodian was proposed, in a bill introduced in the House today by Representative Sabath, Democrat, Illinois.

These estates are of $10,000 or less, and the amount involved is $20,000,000.

BILL TO SMASH K. K. K. FILED IN STATE HOUSE

The first move to legislate against the Ku Klux Klan in Massachusetts came today when Representative-elect J. F. Curtis of East Boston filed a bill with the clerk of the House of Representatives.

This provides:

"Any member of the Klan or other organization, formed for the purpose of antagonizing any religion or racial group, who invites others to join such organization, or who advocates the unlawful destruction of property shall be liable to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for five years or both fine and imprisonment."

UNDERWOOD KEEPS UP SENATE FILIBUSTER

Washington, Nov. 29.—Democrats started the second day of their filibuster against the Republican ship-canal-and-lynching bill today on the convening of the Senate. When Senator Curtis suggested the senate proceed with its business until night and then adjourn over Thanksgiving, Senator Underwood remarked: "We might just as well adjourn now, for there will be no business transacted this day in the United States Senate."

AUTOISTS KILLED AS DRIVER LOSES WHEEL

Woonsocket, Nov. 29.—James Mc[illegible], a former bartender of No. 278 Knight street, Providence, was instantly killed, and Milton A. Arnold of No. 85 Oxford street, also of Providence, was injured when an auto in which they were riding lost a wheel on Cumberland Hill road, Woonsocket, skidded 39 feet and overturned. Arnold is a Providence policeman.

If Men Wore No Clothes

Would That Improve Them? Hardly

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

You will read Wells' new and extraordinary novel, "Men Like Gods," in this and other issues of HEARST'S INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE. It will do more than amuse you, it will make you THINK, which is infinitely more important, and which is H. G. Wells' real business.

Everything is in that Wells story, from Haegel, the German philosopher, to modern English politics and future possibilities of a perfect earth. And through it all there is an intensely interesting story of his higher land, where naked civilization does well without clothes.

H. G. Wells, like the French "Homme orchestre," plays many instruments, and plays them all at once.

With all respect for the great Wells, the average man is of the opinion that clothes are a sign of progress, nakedness a sign of savagery—here on this earth and probably on other worlds—unless the climate, the bodies of the inhabitants and the methods of developing the brain are very different from our own. In ancient Greece nudity was admired. Girls and boys ran races stark naked.

There was beauty in Greece, but little sentiment.

You will read a long while in periods of Greek history before you find a man in love with his wife, although you will find one of the noblest Greeks, Pericles, very deeply and most beautifully attached to a lady that was not his wife.

Clothing means mystery, mystery means thought, and thought means progress.

A little boy of fifteen with his slate in his lap, looking at the pig tails and the calico dress of the little girl in front of him has a certain nobleness of sentiment in his half developed mind that could not exist if he were looking at a little creature entirely naked like a kitten or a puppy dog.

All life is mystery, the stars, the sun, the earth, whence we come and to which we return. The mystery makes it interesting.

Probably women first invented clothes because they know that mystery would make THEM INTERESTING.

Read Wells' extraordinary story in HEARST'S INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE, and think about it for yourself especially. That's what counts. He shows a world without clothing. This one, half clothed, would surely be no better if naked.

Not Friends of the President

The Men "Not Interested" in a Living Wage

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

When the United States Railroad Board announces in substance that "a living wage" has nothing to do with its decisions on wages, it makes unnecessary trouble for the President and his party, and it ought to have a vacation—a long one.

What other definition could there be of the right kind of wages except "a living wage"? What more modest definition could there be? Every HORSE gets "a living feed," enough oats and hay a day for work tomorrow.

Every railroad, by the way, is allowed "a living rate." Not only that, but government says it must have what it costs to run the railroad, and in addition a nice fat PROFIT for the stockholders. You have the Supreme Court saying that 6 per cent. every year more than "a living rate" is the minimum.

When the worker says "Give me today enough to eat, and feed my family, that I and they may keep alive and work later," he is not asking anything very unreasonable. Unlike the railroad stockholders, he doesn't say, "Give me enough so that I can live in utter idleness, later, on my dividends, while other men work and pay me a profit."

The President has some foolish men in his Labor Board—at least one foolish man.

That Hurricane

It Need Not Come

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

When is "the hurricane" coming in Europe? And will it have strength enough to cross the ocean, as did the violent breeze of 1914?

Lloyd George, who doesn't try deliberately to frighten anybody, says that Europe, including England, is "facing a hurricane," and by that he means another convulsion of the nations infinitely worse than the one just ended.

Where will the hurricane start, which way will it go, what will Europe look like when it is over? How much will it cost this country in men and money? And how much nearer will it bring this earth to the domination of the Asiatic races?

Suppose our Pilgrim fathers had fought and killed each other, instead of killing Indians. How long would they have lasted?

Already Kemal, the Arabic, bullies the allies. It is time for white men to stop fighting.

Tobacco Is Mild

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Captain Finch, great explorer, tells the Royal Geographical Society that smoking cigarettes helped his breathing while he was climbing Mt. Everest, highest mountain on earth.

That is true, possibly. And there isn't any doubt that in a world where the majority of men must do SOMETHING foolish, smoking is the least harmful foolish thing they can do.

Nevertheless, LITTLE boys should remember that if Captain Finch had never smoked a cigarette in his life, he would have climbed just as well without the cigarette.

Natives of Tibet that never saw a cigarette could and did climb all around him. Scientists say that carbon monoxide is plentiful in tobacco smoke and may have helped in the high altitude where it was lacking in the atmosphere. But that has nothing to do with boys living a few hundred feet above sea level.

Trouble Avoids the Open Eye

By Winifred Black

SHE is the funniest little tyke in the world—

The very funniest.

She isn't pretty, but dear me, she's ten times more fascinating than merely pretty can be.

Her hair curls in the most ridiculous little, tight knots all over her head, and it's red, and she has a fair skin and freckles.

And her eyes—sometimes hazel and sometimes they're yellow like a piece of unclouded amber, and sometimes they're brown like a clear pool deep in the forest, and sometimes they are gray like the cold sea, and sometimes they are black and full of dancing fire.

Those eyes are going to lead their owner into a good deal of trouble some day, and as for the trouble they'll make other people—well, I'm glad I shan't be responsible for it—that's all.

We've had a secret about James, junior, for some time—Cherry-top and I. It began when he sent her the bird book in the first class in the kindergarten. She told me about James, junior, that day.

"He's the nicest boy," she said. "His hands are always clean and he's never once said he word about the color of my hair."

And James, junior, appeared to think that she was a nice girl, too.

His waited for her outside of kindergarten and walked to her gate with her, and one day, when James, junior's mother made some specially good nut fudge he brought two pieces of it to Cherry-top.

That was the day Cherry-top told me she intended to marry James, junior, when they were both grown up.

So of course, it was natural for me to ask her about him.

"James, junior"—when I spoke his name, her voice broke in like the crackling of ice in a cold pitcher.

"I have changed my mind about him," she said. "He kicks—and I shall never marry a man who kicks."

Of course, I understood exactly what she meant. These disillusions are terrible, but after all, one couldn't marry a man who kicks, no matter how clean he kept his hands or what perfectly wonderful fudge his mother made—could one now?

Bless her heart, Cherry-top. I hope you'll go on keeping your eyes open as long as you live. You'll stay out of a lot of trouble so surely as you do.

One-Man Cars

Editor Boston American:

I want to register my protest against the one-man car. One narrow door to enter and leave and this blocked by people making change; the crowd at the front end of passengers who know that if they go back in the car it will probably be impossible to get out again in time for their stop, and the danger of a car being driven by a man who has so many other duties to perform are some of the disadvantages. It does not seem to me that this can be the only eventual road to a five-cent fare. BOSTONIAN.

'Mystery Man' of Europe

By David M. Church

LONDON, Nov. 28—The Mystery Man of Europe—Sir Basil Zaharoff!

Practically unknown in America, Sir Basil Zaharoff is credited with being one of the few men of great power in Europe.

Lord Beaverbrook has recently written an article indirectly tracing many of Britain's misfortunes and misunderstandings in the Near East to Sir Basil.

The London press, which opposes Lloyd George, has attacked Sir Basil during the recent Near East crisis and has inferred most strongly that it was due to his influence that Lloyd George backed the unsuccessful and disastrous ventures of the Greeks in Asia Minor.

Sir Basil Zaharoff is credited with having amassed a fortune of some $100,000,000. He was born in Russia, of a Greek father and a French mother. He went to Paris to make his fortune, and he made it. He was made a Knight of the Grand Cross of the Bath by Lloyd George—an unexampled distinction for one not a subject of Great Britain.

Sir Basil during the World War was referred to as "Monsieur Z." It was known that "Monsieur Z" was a man of great power, but few knew his identity. His fortunes are said to have rolled up immensely during the war.

Sir Basil is credited with being, or having been, the largest shareholder in Vickers-Maxime, the greatest of the European munitions makers. He is at the head of a French group which is associated with the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. His holdings in banks and business enterprises spread all over Europe. He is credited with controlling newspapers and even dictating their policies. It is even charged that he is a stockholder in one of the leading pro-George newspapers in Fleet street.

Sir Basil is said to have supported the Greek Treasury during the Balkan Wars to the extent of $200,000 a month. He has helped to finance the Venizelist cause and is said to have spent nearly $20,000,000 in financing the Greek invasion of Asia Minor.

No one knows what power this little-known man has, but there are many who believe that Zaharoff is the most powerful figure in all Europe.

Harrison avenue, named after WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, ninth President of the United States, was once the principal thoroughfare of Boston's aristocracy, which later migrated to the Back Bay. It is rapidly losing the last vestiges of its old residential character, being today one of Boston's busiest business streets.

It isn't often that witnesses for the opposition put themselves out after a long and spirited court hearing to hunt up opposing counsel and thank them. MRS. JOHN A. MacINTYRE, of Somerville did just that to ATTORNEY WILLIAM H. POWERS, Jr., of counsel for MRS. RAAB. "I want to thank you for your very courteous treatment while I was on the stand," said MRS. MacINTYRE, and her husband seconded the motion.

Muffs are not in general use among the flappers, but they still "go through the motions," using the spacious sleeves of their coats in lieu of the muffs. GARRETT P. SERVISS ON THE PHONOGRAPH

By Garrett P. Serviss

"When a single note of a given pitch is reproduced on a phonograph, the diaphragm vibrates at a constant rate during the entire duration of the sound. In what manner does the diaphragm vibrate when several notes are to be reproduced at the same time? Apparently it has the property of vibrating at several different rates at the same time. How is this possible?—J. S., Dorchester, Mass."

THE vibrations of the diaphragm, whether in reproducing the sounds or in giving motion to the stylus which records the sounds by either indented or waving lines on a prepared disk, simply follow the vibrations of the air by which the sound is conveyed.

These vibrations are the resultants of many combinations of the original sound waves. On the record shorter waves may be superposed on longer ones, somewhat as wind ripples ride upon water waves. But the ear is able to appreciate both in combination. John Tyndall, who was the most "human" of scientists, has given the best description of the undulations or impressions simultaneously transmitted by the air by virtue of the principle of superposition that I am acquainted with.

"The same air," wrote Tyndall, "is competent to accept and transmit the vibrations of a thousand instruments at the same time. When we try to visualize the motion of the air to present to the eye of the mind the battling of the pulses driven by many instruments, the imagination retires baffled from the attempt.

"Still, amid all the complexity, the law holds good, every particle of air being animated by a resultant motion, which is the algebraic sum of all the individual motions imparted to it. And the most wonderful thing of all is that the human ear, though acted on only by a cylinder of that air, which does not exceed the thickness of a quill, can detect the components of the motion, and, aided by an act of attention, can even isolate from the aerial entanglement any particular sound."

If two notes are sounded absolutely together they will either extinguish one another if equal and meeting in opposite phases, or they will to a greater or less extent reinforce or diminish one another, or if they differ in pitch, i. e., in rapidity of vibration, the one may, as it were, ride upon the other. In any case, what the phonograph records is the resultant of the combinations formed by the waves in the air. It does not contain on the record disk or cylinder impressed waves or curves corresponding to the tones of each of the instruments or voices that actuate the sound, but only a continuous curve or a continuous line of varied indentation, which bears the impress of the resultant, or complex, sound wave formed of all the tones that are heard together. It is, as Tyndall pointed out years before the phonograph was invented, the ear that disentangles, or evaluates, this complex sound.

When a violin is played, and then a flute or a piano, the hearing recognizes immediately which instrument is producing the music, even though each plays the same tune in the same key, and the listener does not see the instruments. If the tune played by each instrument in turn is recorded by a phonograph, there will be differences in the impressions made on the waxed cylinder or plate, corresponding to the peculiar form that each instrument imparts to its sound-waves.

Then, if all the instruments are played together the effect is combined in a single record line, but the attentive ear can isolate the sound of each instrument—a feat transcending anything that the eye can do with the combined waves of different colors that compose the orchestra of sunlight, for the eye must first have the waves separated by refraction before it can distinguish them. And the same thing happens when the sounds of all the instruments of an orchestra are recorded by the phonograph.

CLUBWOMEN HELP TO DECIDE COURT CASES

Akron, O., Nov. 28.

THE custom of clubwomen being present at daily sessions of police court here is proving of advantage to the presiding magistrate, according to admissions of Judge A. F. O'Neil. "What do you think of that decision?" is an unusual question put by O'Neil after disposing of a case, particularly if the defendant is a girl or woman. He directs his inquiry to the women present in the court room.

He claims he frequently receives excellent advice from these women spectators and investigators, who represent the leading social and civic organizations of the city.

In a recent case the court imposed a fine of $50 on a woman for shoplifting and was about to add thirty days in jail. It was the defendant's first offence, and when he put his customary question to two club women. In the room he was induced to knock off the jail sentence.

Mrs. John Cummings, former president of the Women's Welfare Club of America, frequently attends police court. She believes her presence and that of her companions adds to the dignity of the proceedings, prevents unseemly talking and behavior and helps the judge.

"We study court conditions," she says, "and make reports to our organizations which later are submitted to the civil authorities. We are mainly interested in girls brought into court and the correction instead of punishment which we think should be applied when it is a first offence.

"Once we believed liquor law violators should be given the severest penalties and as much time in jail as possible, but we soon saw that would crowd the prisons and embarrass the administration of justice. Now we favor heavy fines. That seems to be the best cure for bootleggers."

LEGISLATIVE MOVE TO STOP K. K. K.

WOMAN BEATEN IN ASYLUM

MRS. ROBERT ST. CLAIR AND HER BOY

She says the boy's grandparents in Laconia, N. H., didn't want the trouble of looking after him, and, as they objected to her seeing him often, she just took him from them and brought him to her Arlington home.

GETS LIFE FOR PART IN FATAL HOLDUP

Springfield, Nov. 29.—George E. Belanger, found guilty by a jury today of the murder of Wallace L. Weber, a storekeeper, on September 15, 1921, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Webster Thayer. Belanger was indicted jointly with Albert J. Dettinger, who pleaded guilty last May to a second degree charge and is now serving a life sentence.

Duhaime was a witness in the Belanger trial, testifying that he was induced by Belanger to hold up, rob and shoot Weber.

One juror saved Belanger from the electric chair, it was learned after the defendant was sentenced to prison. The trial judge was cleven to one for first degree murder, the one juror being opposed to the death penalty.

SWINDLER OF WOMEN JAILED

New York, Nov. 29.—Dr. Knute Arvid Enlind, who with Alfred H. Lindsay and Major Rochonde Sutton conducted a "Domino Club" partnership by means of which wealthy women were swindled out of large sums through bogus stock sales, today was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term.

HOLIDAY PARDON TO DEATH CAR DRIVER

A Thanksgiving pardon was granted today by Governor Cox and the Governor's Council to Albert P. Peach, of Springfield, serving a three to four years' sentence in Charlestown State Prison for manslaughter. Peach drove an auto that collided with a car in which Mrs. George Peck of Palmer was a passenger on Bliss Curve in Wilbraham, scene of seven fatal accidents. Mrs. Peck died from the injuries.

Peach had served a year and a half and had been a model prisoner.

Sixty other applications for Thanksgiving pardons were turned down.

ASKS RETURN OF ALIEN PROPERTIES

Washington, Nov. 29.—Return of approximately 30,000 small estate and properties seized during the war from aliens and held in trust by the alien property custodian was proposed in a bill introduced in the House today by Representative Sabath, Democrat, Illinois.

These estates are of $10,000 or less, and the amount involved is $20,000,000.

COLLECTOR HELD UP BY FOUR; LOSES $15

Joseph Hughes, collector for the American Rescue Workers, No. 107 Cabot street, Roxbury, was held up by four young men in an automobile and robbed of $15 today as he was walking on Beacon street, Brookline, back of the Chestnut Hill reservoir.

ADMITS HE GAVE BABY HIS NAME

"I Did It to Shield My Sister From That Woman," Says Dorothy's Uncle

"I am not the husband of Mary Coakley. I never married Mary Coakley either through the church or by common law practice. It is all a lie made up to blacken my reputation."

John D. Gardiner made this statement today to the Boston American. He is the uncle and would be guardian of Dorothy Gordon, birth inmate of McLean Insane Hospital.

Mary Coakley, former maid in the Gordon household, says he is the father of her child and deserted her and their child nine years ago.

Mary Coakley charges that Gardiner and she became man and wife about 1919. Records of the christening of her child bearing the name of Gardiner have been found in New York.

Gardiner today admitted that he attended the christening of the baby and that he had given the baby his name. He charges that he did this because the Coakley woman had been threatening his sister, Mrs. F. D. Gordon, and had promised to stop if he would give her child a name.

WAS SHIELDING SISTER.

"I suppose I was a fool to let myself fall into such a trap," said Gardiner, "but I was thinking only of my sister. She has suffered at the hands of the Coakley woman for years. Mary Coakley knew of certain facts that my sister did not want F. D. Gordon, father of Dorothy, to know.

"Mary also knew of the illegitimate birth of Dorothy. She threatened to tell Dorothy of her parentage and she threatened to tell Mr. Gordon the facts she knew about my sister. Holding this hammer over my sister's head, she forced my sister to support her for years.

"She wanted to give the child a name. She appealed to me to help her out. She promised if I would

Halts Navy Scrapping in Britain

London, Nov. 29 (By the Associated Press).—Great Britain will scrap no more warships under the Washington disarmament treaty until the other nations have taken action and scrapped their quota, according to the assurance given a questioner in the House of Commons today by Eyres Monsell, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty.

Asked who had ratified the treaty, Commander Monsell replied:

"The treaty has been ratified by the United States, Japan and this country, but not yet by France or Italy.

"So far as is known the United States and Japan have not disposed of ships, except possibly obsolete ships that have been disposed of in ordinary course."

BILL TO SMASH K. K. K. FILED IN STATE HOUSE

The first move to legislate against the Ku Klux Klan in Massachusetts came today when Representative-elect J. F. Curtin of East Boston filed a bill with the clerk of the House of Representatives.

This provides:

"Any member of the Klan or other organization, formed for the purpose of antagonizing any religion or racial group, who invites others to join such organization or who advocates the unlawful destruction of property shall be liable to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for five years or both fine and imprisonment."

UNDERWOOD KEEPS UP SENATE FILIBUSTER

Washington, Nov. 29.—Democrats started the second day of their filibuster against the Republican sponsored anti-lynching bill today on the convening of the Senate. When Senator Curtis suggested the senate proceed with its business until night and then adjourn over Thanksgiving, Senator Underwood remarked: "We might just as well adjourn now, for there will be no business transacted this day in the United States Senate."

80-POUND PATIENT BLACK AND BLUE, SAYS SISTER

Holbrook, Nov. 29.—A story of Rose Durgen, who is frail and worn down to only eighty pounds, being "restrained by force" until she was black and blue on head and face and bruised the length of her body while a temporary patient recently in Taunton Insane Hospital, was told today.

The story was told, with increasing indignation, by Rose's widowed sister and sole support, Mrs. Eva Harrington of this town.

Mrs. Harrington said that when she went to the hospital last Sunday, being uneasy about her sister, the hospital authorities argued against her seeing her sister. When she insisted she was shown into the not bath room. To quote Mrs. Harrington this was the picture that confronted her.

"I found Rose strapped in a bathtub of steaming hot water.

"Both sides of her face were bruised black and blue. Her left eye was black, swollen and closed.

"Her arms and legs were

PONZI JUROR ILL; TRIAL IS HALTED

The trial of Charles Ponzi, "financial wizard," was abruptly halted for several hours today by the sudden illness of George Mathews, one of the jury.

He was stricken with indigestion while in the jury box. Judge Fosdick declared recess. As Mathews was walking to the jury room he partly collapsed.

Ponzi was pleading his case at the time.

Attorney-General Allen was a spectator today and listened closely to what Ponzi said.

Ponzi, with one hand in his pocket, spoke easily to the jurors. Opening his address, he said: "In February, 1920, I was solvent and after bruised almost their whole length and even the backs of her hands, too.

"Although Rose had been apparently willing and happy to go there the week before, she burst into tears and begged me to take her home."

One of the woman physicians there told Mrs. Harrington, she says, that "a most unfortunate thing" happened the night before: that Rose "grew violent" and they had to "restrain her with force."

TOLD OF STRAPPING.

Superintendent Green of the hospital told Mrs. Harrington, the latter said, that they had to "strap Rose down."

The black eye must have been caused by one of the other patients, Mrs. Harrington was informed.

A thing that makes Mrs. Harrington especially indignant is that she particularly stipulated, when she took Rose to the Taunton institution, that Rose was to have a quiet room by herself, away from any violent patients, and was to be kept rested.

How any such restraint was necessary on a frail woman weighing only eighty pounds is something Mrs. Harrington cannot understand.

This makes the second time within a week that Taunton Insane Hospital has come into the limelight in connection with treatment of patients.

PATIENT FOUND DEAD.

Last Sunday, the same day that Mrs. Harrington found her sister black and blue, Captain John Gonbon, a patient in the hospital, was found dead with broken jaw, punctured pleural cavity, seven splintered ribs and many bruises. This was testimony given by Medical Examiner Atwood at a Taunton inquest into Capt. n Gonbon's death. Francis P. King, hospital attendant, said Gonbon tried to attack him and he had to "use force" to restrain the patient.

Mrs. Harrington lost no time Sunday in removing her sister from the institution. She told Superintendent Green:

"I'd like to take my sister out immediately, before she is murdered."

Rose Durgin is of the simple-minded type, according to Mrs. Harrington. She is thirty-five years old. Since her return home Sunday she has become more calm. But her bewildered brain cannot comprehend why she should have gone through such an experience. Today she pleaded pitifully to her sister:

"How was it that I got beaten so, how was it?"

Mrs. Harrington is employed in a stationery store in Boston. She had a housekeeper to take care of her sister while she worked, but the expense was heavy. She thought that Rose might be benefited by careful treatment at Taunton Insane Hospital, especially if she were not brought in contact with any insane persons and violent cases. So she took Rose to the institution November 19.

DESCRIBES VISIT.

She says that Rose was willing to go and seemed happy at the prospect.

Last Thursday Mrs. Harrington visited her sister. She found that Rose had lost weight, even from the scant eighty pounds she had when she entered. Also Rose seemed duller and less cheerful than usual. Rose was quite talkative at home, but not when Mrs. Harrington saw her on this first visit. Mrs. Harrington wondered why.

Rose did talk some however. Among other things she told Mrs. Harrington with pride that some of the other patients called her "Little Angel in the Corner." She thought he other patients liked her.

But what shocked Mrs. Harrington was finding, she said, that Rose was in a ward with twenty other patients in all stages of insanity. Some screamed and were violent.

"In order for the patients to go from this ward to the bathroom they had to pass through the big bath chamber, a room full of tubs into which patients were being put into hot baths by force. It was very nerve-racking to see," Mrs. Harrington said.

DESCRIBES MEALS.

"I remained there much of that Thursday and saw how meals were served and the general life. Potatoes were served with the skins on. Patients had only spoons for eating. So they peeled the potatoes with their finger-nails. When they wanted to mash the potatoes they squashed them in their palms.

Mrs. Harrington returned for second visit last Monday.

"The authorities hesitated," she said, "to let me go in. When I questioned them as to Rose's condition during the week, they were evasive. But I insisted on going in.

Gave Herself Black Eye, Say Asylum Officials

Taunton, Nov. 29.—Officials and doctors at the Taunton Insane Asylum declare that Rose Durgin, the thirty-five-year-old Holbrook woman, whose sister says she was beaten and badly abused in the asylum during her confinement for a week's period, caused the injuries herself while confined in a private room of the institution.

Dr. Fanny C. Haines, who had personal charge of the woman, today states that Miss Durgin was normal until last Saturday night, when she became so violent the nurses could not control her and she was confined to a special room where she shrieked continuously, tore her hair and abused herself, getting a black eye and several bruises.

Dr. Greene, head of the institution declares that the girl is an epileptic and should never have been sent to Taunton.

Rose Durgin was admitted to Taunton on Nov. 19 on papers signed by her sister Mrs. Eva Harrington and Chief of Police Crocker of Holbrook. Last Sunday Mrs. Harrington visited her, found her badly beaten and in a run down condition and immediately had her taken from the institution. After getting her home, Mrs. Harrington attributes the girl's condition on the last methods and rough treatment accorded her in the hospital.

PAYS TON OF COAL AS FINE

FIGURES IN NOVEL COURT DECISION

William Bearron, coal dealer, of No. 221 Chelsea street, East Boston (in oval above), gave away a ton of coal, free, to Louis Goldberg of No. 99 Chelsea street, a customer of his. Bearron did this under the orders of Judge Charles J. Brown in the East Boston Court. He had been arrested for selling Goldberg a sack of coal that was five pounds short. Judge Brown decided on the punishment and Bearron readily agreed to make matters right in the way indicated by the court. Bearron's coal wagon is shown and above it his fortunate customer.

PONZI ARGUES CASE TO JURY

I had paid all my household, office and other expenses I was able and did pay $2,000 in notes.

"How was I able to do it? You probably recall the parable of feeding 5,000 people with one fish and one loaf of bread."——

Mr. Flaherty: "Five fish, Mr. Ponzi."

"Oh, yes, you are right, Mr. Flaherty.

"I am accused of conspiracy and stealing through false pretences," he said. "My real object in inquiring of each witness, and especially the co-defendants regarding the buying of coupons was because I came into court to lay my cards on the table and play fair.

"It would have been an easy matter to approach the co-defendants and coach them.

INSISTS HE MADE PROFIT.

"If I said I was making 150 to 200 per cent. profit it was so. If I said I could pay in forty-five days it was so. When the Commonwealth comes before you and says Ponzi did not do so, bear in mind that the Commonwealth must prove it.

"The government has failed to produce any evidence that I was not dealing in international reply coupons. I have produced some evidence that I was dealing in them.

"You have heard testimony about Mr. Sarti (foreign agent). His word was good enough for me. If he represented to me that he invested in international reply coupons and gave me my profit that was good enough for me. I was not going to investigate his word."

Lionello Sarti was Ponzi's foreign agent, the somewhat mysterious personage who was supposed to have bought all the reply coupons in which the wizard dealt. Government agents have been unable to find anything about him.

ANDREW HITS AT SHIPPING MEASURE

Washington, Nov. 29.—Reversing its previous action, the House this afternoon, by a vote of 221 to 27, eliminated a provision from the ship subsidy bill barring intoxicating liquor from subsidized ships.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Attacking the administration shipping bill in the House today, Representative Andrew, Republican, Massachusetts, hailing from Gloucester district, declared the measure still offered a dangerous precedent "which, if adopted, will hound us for years to come."

Mr. Andrew said the easiest course was to support the bill. "But no member wants to see a bill put through which involves a large expenditure of public money," he added, "unless he is convinced that expenditure will bring at least an equal return, and will not constitute a bad precedent for future legislation.

"I believe that this bill, which involves a possible expenditure of a billion dollars of the people's money during the next decade, is not likely to reduce shipping charges substantially or bring an equivalent benefit to the country as a whole. I believe that if adopted it will offer another precedent in the way of Federal aid and paternalism which will plague us for the rest of our days."

William Bearron, East Boston coal dealer, ordered by Judge Brown to deliver a ton of coal free to Louis Goldberg of No. 99 Chelsea street, whom he short-weighted eight pounds in a hundred, reported to the court today that he had made delivery.

Judge Brown was surprised at Bearron's promptness and ordered Officer Thomas G. Duggan to investigate. At Goldberg's house Duggan found a ton of nut coal in the bin.

Bearron then produced his receipt from Goldberg for the coal, thanked the judge, who placed his case on file and left the courtroom with a broad smile.

U. S. TO CLAMP LID ON LIQUOR VIOLATIONS

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Following conferences with President Harding, Attorney-General Daugherty today instructed all United States district attorneys to urge Federal judges to render more severe sentences against violators of the prohibition act.

This order was the first move in the plan of the administration to halt widespread violations of the Volstead act.

Prosecutors were directed to obtain injunctions against building owners whose premises are used for purposes of bootlegging or distilling illicit liquors.

CHANGE IN LINEUP.

Prohibition officials plan important changes in the line up of State enforcement officers, following President Harding's declaration favoring stricter enforcement.

Several important wet strongholds are affected. A new prohibition director for New Jersey to succeed Charles H. Brown, is expected soon. Rumors John T. Davis of Pennsylvania will resign were not confirmed but Davis is said to have indicated he would like to be relieved. Charles Gregory, director of Illinois, soon will be succeeded by a man yet to be selected.

TO SEEK STATE AID.

The work of reconstructing the enforcement offices in other States is progressing rapidly. Readjustments will be made with the aid of personal representatives sent by Commissioner Haynes into the localities affected.

A special effort will be made by Federal officers to establish closer co-operation with State and municipal authorities.

MAYOR FINDS $60,000 TO FIX FANEUIL HALL

Faneuil Hall, "Cradle of Liberty," will be restored to its original condition of colonial days, Mayor Curley announced today in fulfillment of his pre-election promises.

The Mayor has discovered $60,000 available for use at once on the famous structure.

It will eventually cost $150,000 to make the restoration complete. The balance, $90,000, will be appropriated next year.

The Mayor has engaged Ralph Adams Cram as the architect. The yellow paint on the exterior of the building will be sandblasted off, and 100 coats of new paint applied.

A sprinkler system will be installed to protect the market beneath the main hall. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company headquarters and exhibition hall and the belfrey will be fixed up. The old awning will be replaced with a metal and glass covering all four sides of the building. Fire officials have for some time complained that the present awnings are a fire menace.

Hello, U. S. A.
Go It Alone
We May Have Ships
Tax Dodging Made Easy

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922, Star Company.)

ON THE sky above New York city yesterday a flying man wrote in smoke, plainly legible, the words, "Hello, U. S. A."

That's interesting in various ways. It puts a finishing touch on advertising to use the sky for "preferred position." It isn't entirely new. The first great advertisement was the rainbow, advertising the fact that there wouldn't be any more floods.

When you see "Hello, U. S. A." written across the sky by a friendly American flier you say, "very interesting. Now let's be careful that no fliers from Asia or Europe ever improve on that with 'Hello, U. S. A. How much will you pay if we promise not to destroy your greatest cities?"

THE FRENCH have started the "go it alone" program, encouraged by Lloyd George's fall from power. The French cabinet votes to seize German mines in case the Germans fail to make on January 15 a payment that they CANNOT make.

"Woe to the vanquished," is always true. Woe to the victors, also, if they lack discretion. Invading Germany and confiscating part of it will not make Germany pay thousands of millions in gold that she hasn't got. It MAY bring Bolshevism to the edge of the Rhine. France wouldn't find that comfortable.

ONE HUNDRED and thirty-two for ship subsidy, ninety-three against, in the House. It looks like a ship subsidy. The country ought to have ships in peace, and can't live without them in war.

Enemies of the ship subsidy say it will cost $75,000,000 a year, instead of $30,000,000. All right; cheap at the price, if we get the ships.

When the last war started the country spent a thousand million dollars hastily, and got, among other junk, six hundred million dollars' worth of wooden ships that it can't give away. Whether we can build up a navy as we used to do, we don't know. But we do know that we can't create ships profitably in a hurry.

THE INCOME of the government this year drops one billion, three hundred and ninety-seven million dollars. Quite a drop. The New York Times says, "The tax fountain is drying up." That isn't it. The "tax fountain," that is to say the men that are able to pay and ought to pay, have learned how to avoid taxes, leaving the expense of government, as usual, to the little fellows.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND millions of securities that pay no income tax, conveniently manufactured by cities and States to oblige the rich; stock dividends instead of cash dividends, declared by the court to be NOT INCOME, have solved the problem for the big human tax fountains."

The question is, whether the big men are not dodging, and evading a little too cleverly for their own future welfare.

CORN-FED AFFINITY CALLED HERSELF HIS 'LONESOME BABY'

The corn-fed beauty from the Iowa plains, who sent such a deluge of throbbing letters to Professor John B. Tiernan of Notre Dame University that he went to Chicago for a marriage which lasted hardly until the ink on the license was dry, had a way of expressing herself that simply couldn't be resisted.

More of the letters written by this girl, Blanchet to the professor, are today published in the Boston American. Among the expressions that melted the professorial heart were the following:

"I love you next to my God, and that is nearly as much as it is possible to love, for I worship at your shrine"; and this:

"Do you think that after being your wife and sleeping in your arms, loving you and—well, just being your wife with your interests at heart and your honor in my hands—do you think I could be the one to smear it? John, you don't know your girl, or you wouldn't ask that at all."

On November 17 she wrote:

Proud of Love

Dearest John:—

"10.30 and it is beautiful morning and I feel just like going on a long hike, but cannot spare the time. I have been over inspecting Prof's new home. It's the cutest place for its size, all modern air rooms and bath and I just couldn't keep from wishing it was ours, and just what I'd want as furnishings and draperies. Foolish girl, to day dream. I didn't really care so much about the house—just a house. Any one can have, but there is not every girl in Iowa, U. S. that can have such a wonderful man as I have nor be as proud in love as I am with mine, for I'm proud of him and his perfection, his broad views; his clean life and most of all, his love for me, that is the most wonderful part of it.

"O, if I could just have you to give a bear hug and just know you were near, you wonderful man. I'm afraid I'm going to spoil you because I just cannot help but make a fuss over you, when I love you so much. Be good and write me a long, long Love.

"Your Very Own,
"Blanche."

And the same day also sent this:

"Dearest Man O'Mine:

"Thanks for the stamps and the stationery, although I have not yet arrived. I surely appreciate the paper, but dear, the stamps—I'm not to the stage yet where I cannot buy paper or stamps myself, only paper you couldn't buy here if you had millions. This is all they have, and sometimes you can't even get this.

"Dear, I'm enclosing some photos of our family. My daughter is the wee one. You can guess the rest of them. It was taken by the side of the house, when the whole family had returned from picnic, but you can see what a handsome family we have. We wouldn't take the prize, though, not for beauty. The small picture is one my own daddy carried in his watch of me, so you see, dear, I have never been hurt for beauty. I'm letting you guess whether I'm in the family picture. Does it look like you thot I'd look? O, Dearest, I surely wish you'd soon be free, so I wouldn't feel so guilty writing to you. Really dear, my conscience hurts me at times when I stop to think you are not yet free.

"Are you coming here Thanksgiving? I'd sort of like to know if you haven't your divorce, yet I believe I'd better stay at Aunt Lilla's while we are together in Chicago, for dear, it is so easy to sin when you love and never am I going to commit that terrible sin.

Fond of Children

"I have been thinking of you and all you have written today. I feel so sorry for you dear, but my heart goes to those blessed girls of yours. I am interested in their welfare because they are yours and because too, I'm so very fond of children. I'm crazy about them. I never tire of them. How I wish I had a home established and the law would give them to you. I'd surely mother and love them to the best of my ability. I hate to see the darlings go to a home. It isn't like mother and daddy's love, no matter how good they are to them. I wish there was another way. She must be a queer mother to show preference in her children. Well, dear, I am not settling those difficulties and I'd better hush when my opinion should not be voiced, but lover, I really am not fickle and I truly think about you and your problems. I'd go crazy living near one that could not make plans and look to it. Believe me, I shall never live in Chicago with wife number 1 there. I'm afraid Chi wouldn't hold us because I can't forgive her for causing you and your babes sorrow. Irene has part of my name. That is my middle name.

"I guess I'll cease planning to be Mrs. T, for I feel all the time as if you and Gus will live together always, and I guess it would be better if you could all be together. But, oh, Lover, I'd hate to relinquish you to her, but she has first claim, yet, I'd miss you dreadful, so you see, dear, I'm a wee bit selfish and want you all myself. Do you think it possible I'll have to give you up?

"What a mockery my life has always been. Just wait till I tell you how terrible Art deceived me. Oh, Gussels's sin is tame beside Arthur's. But I'm not going to tell you till I see you and some of your troubles end, because your heart is full with out my troubles and your pity for me. How I love you and wish there was some way I could help lighten the load my precious boy must carry. Dear, I'd so gladly give help, but I'm afraid all I can do is look on and give you my love and sympathy. If we ever marry and have a home and you could have your girlies and wash them, and think me capable, my arms are open to them, and there is a place already in my heart because their daddy is for them, for I feel so sorry for them. It is the innocent darlings that pay the price for others sins, it seems.

"Dear, my tongue would say more and my heart feels more than I can write with this pen.

"But this, yours and the girls' interests are very dear to me, since I love their daddy so devotedly, for, John, I love you more each day, you mean a heap to me, but words are hard to find to express my love, whether the dreams ever are fulfilled, I shall love you to eternity.

"Yours,
"BLANCHE."

Please Tell Daddy

Written on the back of this November 17 letter was:

"Harold read a part of this, the little simp.

"Listen dear, I'm asking you to do something, but you do as you wish, only it would make it easier here if you'd please tell daddy you love me. You need not ask for me and get yourself bound to any bargains unless you so desire. They think you are divorced and will ask no questions if you do the asking first. Then my company, in Chicago won't be watched by Dad's Methodist family in Chicago. I'm so dumb I can't make myself understood, but if you can get any sense to what I want you to do, you'll be a mind reader, but if you love me and want to make my lot a wee bit easier, write him between now and when I come to meet you.

"He asked me if you knew I had been married. I told him yes, and that I have the girls and all the rest of my pedigree. She (mother) noses around and I hide my letters, but she found one where you wrote about ring. There is one thing I ask you to keep still about and that is your faith because they would tell me; get another and be deceived some more, etc. Oh, do as you think best, but I'm so tired of hearing you don't mean me good that I'd like to show them, that's all.

"But anyway I love you even if they do try to make me think you don't love me. I know you do and I am counting hours and minutes till you come.

"Yours always,

"YOUR LONESOME BABY."

Another letter, dated November 15, expresses impatience for the impending marriage. It reads:

"Dearest Lover—I have just a few minutes for the postoffice is not open on Sunday. But they do send mail out and the postmaster is here and he says he will take mine back with him. Now, tell me I don't love you. Don't ever tell me that again.

"My chum is here today and how wonderful it seems to have one of your own kind. I am going to sing in church tonight, but I ask permission.

"Just ten more days until I'll be all yours. Won't it be wonderful, too wonderful to believe. Now, dear, I ask you to write to daddy. You said to keep it secret. Well, I did a wicked thing in a way and as I am to keep no secrets I'll tell you. I told daddy you were not married, but divorced not quite a year yet.

"Also I told them your home was in Chicago but you were teaching law in the East. They don't know your name nor where you live now. If you do write you can tell them the same. But I don't care whether you do or not. But I would kind of like to have you write Daddy a letter.

"You won't care will you. You can't tell me what's what, anyway, 'cause I won't be your wife before the world, just behind the scenes.

"You can see where I live in Chicago and you in South Bend I'll be my own boss, won't I? Oh, I can just see you all peeved aren't you. Well I was just teasing after the words are said I'm yours and I expect to heed your advice for I know you'll know what is best. Well, lover, I must cease as he is in a hurry, but I love you and I'm all yours and will wait with as much

Woman Who Loved and Lost Tiernan

She Kept the Professor One Day, and Then He Went Back to His No. 1.

SHE'E WIFE NO. 2 IN TRIANGLE.

If Tiernan, who was divorced after one of the most remarkable trials in history, had waited a few months before wedding again, wife No. 2 might be a married woman. The divorce having been knocked out, Mrs. No. 2 is without a husband.

WIFE NO. 2 'DONE FOR GOOD' WITH PROF. TIERNAN

Marshalltown, Ia., Nov. 29.—"I am through with you for good and wish to have nothing further to do with you and your kind."

That was the message Mrs. Blanche Brimmer (Mrs. Tiernan number 2) sent today to Professor John F. Tiernan at South Bend, Ind. Mrs. Brimmer plainly showed her anger over the professor's failure to return to her following their one day honeymoon in Chicago.

One of Tiernan's fervid love letters to his bride of a day was brought to light today.

"I want to say to you, Blanche, dear, right here and now, that I am yours," the letter read.

"You can have me. I pledged myself that I would belong body and soul to the first woman that won my love, and that is you, my sweet little girl from Iowa.

"We have both been through tragedy, loveless marriages, and we have both been betrayed, and naturally we both feel a sense of remorse and sorrow because our love was misplaced and abused and desecrated by an unfaithful partner.

"But, Blanche, there is something in life after all. Blanche, I love women. My love is affection and loyalty and confidence. It is not mere passion."

The letter closed with a description of himself and asked Blanche to watch the papers for his divorce.

CHILE IS ROCKED BY NEW QUAKE

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 29 (By the Associated Press).—A strong earthquake shock was felt in central Chile at 3:10 this morning. The shock, which was noticed here for about forty seconds and similarly at Valparaiso, was felt as far south as Conception, 270 miles southwest of Santiago.

No damage was reported.

'HOOCH' IN FLOOD AT HARVARD

Two Alleged Bootleggers Are Seized With Supply of Liquor

Harvard is being flooded with hooch by bootleggers. Conditions are deplorable.

Such are the findings of Cambridge police now striving to rid Harvard of booze pedlars.

Sergeant Charles H. Prosho today admitted this after appearing in Cambridge district court against James S. Johnston, 27 years old, of No. 13 Adams street, Charlestown, and Daniel F. Clifford, 23, of No. 24 Hudson street, Somerville.

ARRESTS IN DUNSTER HALL.

The men were arrested by the sergeant in fashionable Dunster Hall. Police say they were selling a quart of what is believed to be medicated alcohol redistilled and colored to resemble rye whiskey. They were held in $400 bail for hearing Tuesday.

Sergeant Presho said nineteen quarts of liquor was found in an auto the two prisoners had waiting for them outside of Dunster. The liquor was analyzed. He had reason to believe that eleven quarts had been sold before the arrests, he said.

Certain bootleggers, the sergeant says, have been posing as insurance solicitors and easily obtained entrance to the domitories.

Others, it is said, dressed in the height of fashion, scraped acquaintance with students in Boston hotels and elsewhere and then would have a rendezvous outside, where the liquor would be passed.

DEPLORES CONDITIONS.

"Conditions are deplorable," Sergeant Presho admitted. "We have been trailing bootleggers for some time, but it is very difficult to apprehend them, owing to the clever ruses they employ and the protection given by students.

"I am certain that some of the pedlars have been averaging $300 to $300 a week profit. There is reason to believe that rum runners from Canada solicit orders and then deliver their liquor at the university. There have been cases of New York men here with suitcases filled with booze. Most all of it is moonshine or medicated alcohol redistilled and then colored to look like good liquor."

DRYS NEED BETTER CHIEF, SAYS WILSON

Harold D. Wilson, speaking today in Tremont Temple, said the drys got in the last election 113,000 less votes than in 1920. The wets got within 13,000 of what they polled in 1920.

"This is because many people are disgusted with the leadership along the dry way," said Mr. Wilson. "If the drys hope to gain any strength, they must have better leaders. Towards this end a conference will be called in Boston."

Oklahoma Official Refuses to Enforce Prohibition Law

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 29.—Prohibition is not wanted in Tulsa, declared Prosecuting Attorney W. F. Seaver today in explaining why he had ordered a wholesale dismissal of liquor cases.

"People don't want prohibition, and I am not going to force anything down their throats that they don't want," he stated.

"It isn't the bootleggers and moonshiners that care so much, but the 'good' people of the community who are putting every impediment in the path of honest officials."

Today Governor Robertson ordered an investigation of Seaver's stand. He called it an "outrage and anarchy."

MILD WEATHER ON HOLIDAY CARD

Fair weather with the mercury rising and hovering around 40 at midday is promised by Forecaster Smith for the holiday.

Cold, fair weather prevails in all sections of the country, the lowest recorded temperature being 2 below in Prince Albert, in the Canadian Northwest. Key West, usually the country's warmest spot, reported only 62 degrees, and Galveston 64.

A temperature of 32 was recorded in Boston. This was the highest mark in New ngland. Greenville, Me., and Northfield, Vt., were lowest, with 20

POLISH COUP D'ETAT BELIEVED POSSIBLE

Warsaw, Nov. 29 (By the Associated Press).—A coup d'etat, similar to the Fascisti movement in Italy, is regarded by many as a growing possibility in Poland unless the apparently hopelessly divided parties solve the deadlock over the presidency.

The Nationalists have not succeeded in forming an alliance with the Wiltos minority, which is willing to support the Nationalist policy but demands President Pilsudski's re-election as the price of co-operation.

CANOE UPSET, 2 MISSING 18 DAYS

Millinocket, Me., Nov. 29.—Chief of Police F. M. Gates today sent a crew of men to hunt in the woods for Arthur Munson and George Stevens, two young men who left home eighteen days ago on a hunting trip, intending to return November 25. They have not been heard from since their departure.

The finding of an overturned canoe in the ice of Nollesenic Lake, the destination of the hunters, has led to the fear that they have been drowned.

Witnesses at Graft Probe Say They Gave Money to Councillor

Councilmen William J. Walsh and David J. Brickley today called witnesses at the Finance Commission inquiry into alleged graft in the Baldwin playground purchase to back up their statements as to the sources of bank deposits that have figured in the charges.

Charles Solomon, of No. 37 Middlesex street, a bail commissioner, corroborated Brickley's testimony that $350 of the $710 deposited by Brickley was paid for repairs on Solomon's automobile.

Solomon said he made the payment in cash. He was accustomed to carry about $1,000 in cash with him in case a large bail should be needed at any time.

DOCTOR PAID $100 CASH.

In response to questioning by Attorney Dowling for the commission, he said he believed he got a receipt for the money, but could not find it. His wife perhaps knew where it was, but she was ill and he did not like to ask her.

He was excused from further testimony until the condition of his wife could be checked up. He promised that, if she were well enough, he would look further for the receipt.

Dr. Waldo B. Jones, of No. 1688 Washington street, testified that he gave Brickley $100 in cash in payment of a loan. The payment was in cash, because he had no checking account at the time.

"Did you get a receipt for it?" asked Attorney Dowling.

"No," replied Jones. "A receipt was not necessary for transactions between us."

William Scharton, who, Brickley says, paid him $400 in repayment of a loan, was not on hand when it became time for his testimony, but telephoned that he would appear later.

TELLS OF $300 LOAN.

Francis E. Heedy of Charlestown, employed by the Health Department as a gas inspector, and whose repayment of a $300 loan from Walsh is alleged to account for part of a deposit by the latter, was the next witness.

Heedy admitted that he was working night and day without payment

'TIGER' WREATH FOR TOMB OF LINCOLN

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Georges Clemenceau halted his appeals for American friendship for France today for rest in preparation for the continuation of his tour Thursday morning.

Despite the strain of his speech at the Auditorium and the greatest ovation he has received since his arrival in America, he was up shortly after dawn.

Tomorrow he will go to Springfield, Ill., to lay a wreath on Lincoln's tomb. From there he will go to St. Louis, where he speaks tomorrow night. He then will go to Washington.

The Tiger has received a belated telegram from Samuel Gompers. The message had been following him about the country since his address in New York.

patience as I can for the ten days to pass.

"Dear, they go slowly. I didn't get any letter today though and I don't believe the day will ever close. Do you love me, John? Enough to be with me always?

"YOUR VERY OWN BABY."

Never Sure

This letter followed the next day.

"Dearest—After thinking my letter over, I wondered if you'd think me sort of mercenary? I really am not, just a wee bit worried. I don't want to sell the Essex until I come back, because something might happen. You'd not like me or I you, and I couldn't go to church or anywhere but Hansell without it, as there is just one church here and it's not my church. So I'd be a pretty fix, wouldn't I? I thought of selling it, but finally decided not to until I was sure of you (and we are never sure until we are united).

"So rather than make it embarrassing for me I thought you and I could postpone the ceremony until later. I'll be better fixed at Xmas time unless I spend too much at holiday time, but I guess I won't.

"But get this firmly fixed in your mind, it is not because I do not love you or want you. It is just a complication of reasons. But I'll not answer and say I won't come, for I'll try my best. But don't be too badly disappointed if I can't.

"Seven twenty. Well, beloved, I guess I can come. I'll just naturally sell a Liberty bond. I'd forgot the darned thing. Then that is fixed, I guess. Who do you sell them to? I took them down to my box, so I know one can spy on them. This is a queer letter and I feel like a queer girl just as happy as can be in the thought I'll soon be yours and a wee bit worried for fear something will happen and it better not.

"After we are married you are going to make a call with me. They need never know your place of residence, or your profession, but I'd feel snaking to be in Chicago and not call even if I only make a wee one.

"Well, tonight is lecture course and I guess I'll indulge and so this will be a note. I'll do better tomorrow.

"Heaps of love.

"BLANCHE.

"P. S.—I love you. I want you. I can hardly wait tih I can lay full claim to those arms."

SMITH REPLIES TO ELIOT RAP AT SCHOOLS

Dr. Payson Smith, State Commissioner of Education, today repudiated the charge of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard, that the public schools are in "desperate need of religious teaching."

"With all their deficiencies, I do not agree for a moment with the implication that the public schools are weak and ineffective in their teaching of the principles of human conduct," said Dr. Smith.

"They rank with the home and the church as among the most powerful agencies making for morality and uprightness. The schools are in a very broad and real sense deeply and essentially religious."

"Dr. Eliot was quoted as saying also "The failure of our public schools to bring up good citizens and good voters is conspicuous."

BACK UP STORY OF BRICKLEY AT HEARING

for Walsh as his campaign manager at the time Walsh lent him the money. He repaid it from the savings of almost a year, he said, and for this reason the sum was in cash.

Judge Thomas H. Connelly, of Brighton Court, testified that he repaid Walsh a $500 loan by a $200 check in June and a $200 check in July. The deposit by Walsh, which is being questioned, was made in September.

Connelly said he borrowed the money in order to insure a $1,500 deposit on certain land he was buying. Walsh's check, made out to cash, and endorsed in pencil "T. H. Connelly," was offered in evidence yesterday. This check, Connelly said, was the one Walsh gave him.

DIDN'T ENDORSE CHECK.

Connelly admitted that he generally endorsed his checks, but did not endorse this one. The pencilled name, he surmised, was placed there as a memo by the treasurer or assistant treasurer of the Market Trust Company, where he deposited the check.

"As a former director of the bank, and as a judge," he said, "I did not need to endorse the check."

When asked if he would like to make any additional statements, he said:

"I was not hired either by Mrs. Mahan (attorney for the Beth Israel Congregation) or Heller (president of the Congregation) as counsel, as one newspaper has stated. I was interested in the buying of the property, because I thought the North End should have a playground."

Ex-Senator John J. Gartland repeated his daily report that he had not been able to find the Andrew Sullivan to whom he lost $2,500.

He said that he had been searching all day, and promised to continue his hunt.

PARTNER A WITNESS.

Pierre Schneider, Councilman Brickley's partner in an auto repair business, corroborated testimony as to the repairs on cars, the payment for which Brickley had stated were part of the bank deposits in question.

He explained there was no partnership agreement and he got his share of the business whenever he ran short of money. His profit averaged about $75 a week.

Asked how much he got for his services last week Schneider testified: "I touched Dave about four times last week."

Henry Decker, proprietor of the Film Exchange Transfer Company, corroborated Brickley's story to the effect that he paid the councilman $328 in August for work done on the former's car. He said in cash, he stated, and did not ask for a receipt.

"An Ounce of Prevention is worth a Pound of Cure"

ABOVE are two pictures. Which of them would you choose for your home? In one, an intelligent mother is using a few drops of Zonite as her "ounce of prevention". In the other picture, a grave physician is trying to hold death at bay because those few drops of Zonite were not used.

Perhaps the stricken mother in the more tragic picture thought the small play-time hurt too trivial to bother with. What a terrible mistake! What an agony of self-reproach will be hers if the physician cannot furnish the "pound of cure"!

It is a well-known physiological fact that a small cut or scratch—any slight puncture of the skin—is more apt to lead to serious complications than wounds which bleed freely. A strong flow of blood has a tendency to wash away the germs of blood poisoning and other similar infections which try to settle by millions in any abrasion of the skin, no matter how small. The trivial wound lacks this natural protection and invites the entrance of germs.

U. S. Public Health Service reports show that the so-called "mild antiseptics" in general use heretofore have no appreciable germ-killing power. Poisonous antiseptics—as was proved in the Allied hospitals during the war—cannot be used with safety on the human body in strong enough solution to kill germs, and are therefore little better.

Neglect May Prove Fatal

Statistics show that precious lives are lost every day through insignificant wounds. A robust man sustains a small injury in the performance of his daily work; a woman, busy in the kitchen, cuts a finger; a child suffers a little play-time hurt. Some of the billions of never-sleeping germs, swarming like unseen dust particles in the air, infect the wound and death may result.

Has Saved Many Lives

Zonite is a great modern discovery. It is both powerful and healing. It is an improved form of the miraculous antiseptic that saved hundreds of thousands of wounded soldiers from amputation and death. Although non-poisonous, it has more than twice the germ-killing power of pure carbolic acid. It has a hundred times the germ-killing power of most of the popular "mild antiseptics".

Sterilize all cuts and wounds, no matter how trivial, with Zonite. They will then heal safely with astonishing rapidity and without the usual pain and inflammation. Let a few drops of this magic fluid be your ounce of prevention. They may save a precious life. After infection sets in, the pound of cure is frequently in vain.

Facts About Zonite

Zonite is rapidly supplanting weak, foaming or flavored antiseptics heretofore used by the public, because they cannot be relied upon to destroy infection.

Zonite is rapidly replacing such poisons as bichloride of mercury, carbolic acid, iodine, etc., because experience in the war hospitals in France showed conclusively that they are inefficient, undependable or unsafe.

When promptly used on fresh cuts, wounds and abrasions, Zonite affords the best and safest protection known to materia medica against the dangers of infection.

On account of its great germicidal power and non-poisonous character, Zonite can be used as a mouth wash at sufficient strength to destroy the germs which cause pyorrhea and many other diseases.

Used as a nasal spray and douche it will be of incalculable value during epidemics of contagious childhood diseases.

GIRL DUPED IN LOVE GAME SAYS SHE HAS NOTHING TO REGRET

HER LIFE HAS BEEN RUFFLED

"Game Worth the Candle," Says Wrentham Girl Deceived by Married Man

Franklin, Nov. 29.—Florence Cobb, the motherless little "moth who singed her wings," but who found, when it was all over, that the game had been "well" worth the candle," appeared in the Franklin District Court to see Frank J. Cottier, her forty-two-year-old married weetheart, arraigned on statutory charges.

She was arrested in Cottier's company in a flat at No. 272 Cross street, Malden. He has been held for the Grand Jury. She had left her home in Wrentham on September 15, and had remained out of sight ever since.

When she appeared in court to witness Cottier's arraignment—her father, William P. Cobb, had withdrawn all complaints against her—she discovered that she was unable honestly to regret the episode.

"No, I haven't loved in vain," she confided to a girl reporter.

HEART ALMOST BROKE.

"He always kissed me when he called on me, and it was only two weeks ago that I went with him to Malden to live with him as his wife. That was Heaven. Then, last Saturday, he told me that he was married and couldn't marry me.

"It almost broke my heart. But now—when I think it all over—I don't care."

Florence is just nineteen years old. Her mother died when she was a baby, and it was several years afore she received the care of a stepmother, whom her father married through the medium of an "ad" in a newspaper.

According to neighbors, her life has been unhappy. She found herself out of place in the home her father and stepmother shared, it is alleged, and of late years the girl's health has been poor.

MET LAST SUMMER.

She met Cottier last Summer. This was only a short time after his marriage to Bessie E. Durfee of Foxboro—an event of which Florence was ignorant. Cottier wooed the girl with all the ardor of an experienced man of the world, and his promises of happiness and travel finally induced her to leave her home.

"Frank was so nice to me, I didn't believe he would do anything wrong," she said. "Even when I ran away to Boston with him, I did not realize that I was doing the wrong thing."

And even now, when her love dream is shattered and the grim reality of the police court has completed her disillusionment — does Florence regret her romance?

"But now—when I think it all over—I don't care."

LODGE FOES GAVE TO DRY TICKET

Joseph Walker, Moorfield Storey and Dr. Charles W. Eliot were among the contributors to the Prohibition campaign fund in the recent election, according to returns filed by the Prohibition party.

John D. Fearnain, who organized the anti-Lodge fight in this State, contributed $1,000 and Barbara Fearnain $500.

Mr. Walker, who ran against Mr. Lodge in the Republican primaries, donated $750. John F. Moore of the Boston Finance Commission gave $1,000, and Robert Gould Shaw $250. Mr. Storey's contribution was $50 and Dr. Eliot's $25. Rose D. Forbes gave $250. The largest contribution was of $4,409, given by John B. Lewis, the prohibition candidate for Governor. The prohibition party spent $10,463 in the campaign.

The return shows $446 was paid to Professor John A. Nichols, prohibition-progressive candidate for Governor, and $1,400 to Harold D. Wilson, candidate for the Republican nomination for Attorney-General, "speaking, salary, postage and expenses."

FEAR 15 PUPILS DIED IN FIRE; 30 INJURED

Covington, Ga., Nov. 29.—Searching parties today continued to search the ruins of the High Point Community schoolhouse for the bodies of twelve children missing after a fire. The fire is known to have cost the lives of three children and injuries to about thirty. One teacher also was burned, probably fatally.

"Oh, look at the pretty white dust!" exclaimed a pupil in a second-floor room.

The "dust" was smoke. It came through a door, the single exit from the room. The teacher, Mrs. Oscar Grant, ran to the door, opened it, and a burst of smoke drove her back. The hallway was in flames and the stairs had crumpled.

Mrs. Grant locked the door, walked to the window and told the children to line up. The ground was about twenty feet below. The drop meant almost certain injury, but to stay meant death to them all.

The teacher began lowering the children, but the flames entered the room and licked rapidly towards the window. Three children remained in the line. The flames engulfed them, Mrs. Grant saying later she jumped into the fire to save them.

The teacher's clothing caught fire, and she jumped from the window. Besides burns she has a fractured limb and internal injuries. Only five of the children dropped by Mrs. Grant escaped injury. A funeral procession was halted, and men and women rushed into the building and saved many of the children in the room below Mrs. Grant's.

An overheated stove is believed to have caused the fire.

COMMUNISTS URGED TO AID NEGROES

Moscow, Nov. 29 (By the Associated Press).—The negro question came before an open session of the Third Internationale today. President Kolaroff proposed that detailed reports on the negro be submitted for the purpose of clarifying the subject for European members who are unfamiliar with the problem in other countries.

One negro delegate suggested that the Communist parties support the negro movement everywhere in connection with a proposal to call a congress at Moscow of all the revolutionary negro organizations of the world "to realize a united front of all workers against capitalism and imperialism."

The speaker said that the political rights of negroes in the United States were mere scraps of paper, and that for a long time capitalists had been spreading propaganda among the negroes in favor of white capitalists and against white workers, until now, he said, the workers had done nothing to counteract this.

HARDING'S SPEECH MAY GO BY RADIO

Washington, Nov. 29.—President Harding's address to Congress after the convening Monday of the regular session may be broadcast by radio.

GIRL FIRES GUN AT CROWD; MANY HURT

Livingston, Mont., Nov. 29.—Asserting that she would "die protecting her father," Pearl Tinsley, fourteen-year-old daughter of C. E. Tinsley, who is employed in the local railway shops, fired a shotgun into a crowd of women and children, injuring two women seriously and peppering six children with bird shot. Tinsley was stoned by strike sympathizers several days ago and the girl said she thought the crowd was waiting to attack her father again.

HALL MURDER PROBE DROPPED AS INDICTMENTS ARE REFUSED

MYSTERY REMAINS UNSOLVED

Not Plans Conference to Decide If New Inquiry Will Be Held Later On

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 29 (By the Associated Press).—Is investigation of the Hall-Mills murder case to be pushed along new lines, or is the inquiry to be dropped, at least for the present?

This question today apparently rang on a conference which Attorney-General Thomas F. McCran has indicated he will hold with Special Deputy Attorney-General Wilbur A. Mott, who yesterday failed to obtain from the Somerset County Grand Jury in Somerville indictment of three persons whom the latter indicated it believed responsible for the shooting of Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

ORDERS ARE AWAITED.

Detectives and State troopers attached today that they were without orders. Mr. Mott, after the jury had found, deciding to lay the matter ow, expressed himself as being in state of suspend d animation.

Many residents of Somerville, who have contended that the double slaying, after all, was not half as much the affair of Somerset County as of Middlesex, in which the slain pair had resided, indicated that they would be content if the case were allowed to drop.

In New Brunswick, however, there was evident a strong disinclination to permit the case to fall into the class of unsolved crimes.

Persons who wish the investigation continued pointed hopefully to the fact that Mrs. Jane Gibson, killed by the State as its star witness, still was under close observation at her pig farm. This, they speculated, indicated that the inquiry was to be pushed further.

WANT PROBE CONTINUED.

The only expression coming from the home of Mrs. Frances Noel Hall, widow of the slain rector, was uttered by her lawyer, Timothy N. Pfeiffer. He said he sincerely hoped the authorities would continue their search for the guilty.

Dudley L. Pickman, Jr., Third on Bett Alden's List of Smart Set Eligible Bachelor

By BETTY ALDEN.

Charles E. Cotting.
Francis Brooks.
Dudley L. Pickman, Jr.

GOLF enthusiast and bridge fiend is Dudley L. Pickman, Jr., who comes third on our list of Boston society's half dozen most eligible bachelors.

He is a tall, dark man, with a distinctly reserved manner. He does not, I believe, harbor any profound love for terpsichorean activities, being, in fact, an "outdoor" man—as our very best novels say. Wherefore he spends much of his time on the links and has charge of golf at the Myopia Hunt Club.

Speaking of clubs Mr. Pickman is a member of the Somerset, Country, Essex County (he is on the board of governors there), Exchange, Tennis and Racquet and Myopia Hunt clubs. Like the other two bachelors already mentioned, he is a Harvard man, graduating with the class of 1907.

During the Summer months he lives with his family at Beverly Cove on the North Shore, the Pickmans' Winter residence being at No. 98 Beacon street. It is during the Summer that Dudley Pickman, Jr., and a fellow-bachelor, Harold S. Vanderbilt—or "Mike" Vanderbilt, as he is known to his friends—chum around together. He and Vanderbilt, who also, of course is the very acme of bachelorhood in eligibility, usually go on the annual cruise of the Eastern Yacht Club together. Harry Vanderbilt, as everyone knows, comes each year to Beverly Farms, where he leases "Round Plain Farm," the John Caswell place, for August and September.

During the war he entered the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg and was commissioned first lieutenant in the infantry. I should say that Mr. Pickman was not like Francis Brooks, yesterday's "bachelor," and more nearly like someone else who is soon to be added to our list, namely—but that's getting ahead of the story again.

ROBERT STOW BRADLEY and his daughter, Miss Rosamond Bradley, of Commonwealth avenue, have been giving a number of luncheons during their sojourn at Hot Springs, Va. A few days ago Mr. Bradley and his daughter, together with Miss Lavinia Newell, another member of the Boston colony at the Southern resort, drove over to Fassifern Farm, one of the most popular rendezvous around the Springs. Several weeks ago Miss Bradley's engagement to Charles A. Rheault of Quebec was announced.

FROM tea o'clock in the evening until the wee small hours of four in the morning, may the gay crowd of young people make merry at the Intercollegiate Carnival, which takes place tonight at the Copley-Plaza.

There is a notable list of patronesses for the affair, which was planned chiefly for college folks home for the holidays and others remaining in the city. It's being run by ten prominent Harvard undergrads, including Francis S. Hill, the chairman, as well as Charles B. Barnes, Jr., Willis Paine Beal, Alfred Codman, Jr., George S. Mumford, Jr., and Brooks Potter.

Lovely Mrs. Ollie Ames, Jr. (Caroline Fessenden), is one of the patronesses, a few of the others being Mesdames S. Parker Brewer, Charles K. Cummings, Alfred Codman, Henry S. Grew, 2nd, Francis L. Higginson and Frederick P. Royce.

I NOTE that John Caswell, Jr., brother of pretty "Sister," or Elizabeth Caswell; Dick Storey and his brother-in-law, Theodore L. Storer, are among those who will play Thanksgiving morning in the game between Battery A and the First Corps Cadets. This year the game takes place at Technology Field in Cambridge instead of at the Stadium, where the gridiron battles between these two ancient foes were formerly staged.

Teddy Storer is captain of the Battery A eleven, while his brother-in-law, Dick Storey, is of the opposing team. The marriage of young Storer, a Harvard '18 man, to Katherine Storey, was the first important ceremonial of last June, a host of notables making their way to Trinity Church for the occasion. The bride's brother, Dick Storey, is still a student at Harvard.

MISS DOROTHY KING

GRADUALLY every matron who has charge of anything at the long-heralded Atlantic City Boardwalk Exposition is whipping things into shape, for if the exposition is nearly as good as has been promised, it will be a very wonderful thing. Considering the ability of those who are working for the success of this gigantic affair, there is no reason why the undertaking should not be entirely successful. It opens on Friday of this week at Mechanics Building.

TODAY

people will do the same. Many will not agree with Mr. Clemenceau's ideas as to the duty of America and the rest of the world toward France. But all decent men will respect his earnest patriotism, and will welcome him as the French welcomed Benjamin Franklin, when he crossed the ocean long ago to urge upon Europe friendship and help for his native land.

Not to welcome Clemenceau is to dishonor the memory of Franklin and Jefferson and other early Americans that were only too glad to make their appeal to French sympathy—not in vain.

MARY MacSwiney has been removed from the Dublin prison, in which she refused to touch food for twenty-three days, and now is in the hospital. Her sister, Annie, starving herself at the prison gates as a protest against her sister's imprisonment, collapsed when her sister was freed.

In this case, most strangely, an Irish woman was jailed by Irishmen, to whose government of Ireland she objects. The courage of these sisters explains the long fight that Irishmen have made against England.

Irishmen are brave, but their bravery is as nothing to that of IRISH WOMEN. Men get their courage from their mothers.

THE GREEKS, following their ancient custom of rewarding their successful men and punishing the unsuccessful, have sentenced Gounaris, Prime Minister, Minister of War and other officials to death for the failure of the campaign against the Turks. That's one way of healing the wounded pride of the Greek nation. The Greeks should sentence themselves for their stupidity in choosing and following a foolish king.

FIND SLAYER BARTLETT IS SANE

Alfred W. Bartlett, slayer of Frank E. Small, Dorchester druggist, shot to death in his store on the afternoon of September 29, is "not insane or feeble-minded," in the opinion of Dr. Clarence Brown and Dr. Ralph M. Chamberlain of the Department of Mental Diseases, who filed their report in the Superior Court today.

He is again termed a "psychopathic personality," who believes in the Hindoo teachings of reincarnation and lapses into "silences that are seemingly equivalent to prayer." The doctors also say "this man has an inherent inability to conform with the law."

To Feed Hungry

MRS. ROSE TAYLOR.

Have you given your bit yet? The Salvation Army expects to feed many thousands of homeless hungry persons tomorrow. Each day the blue-clad girls and women are in the streets in an attempt to boost the fund. Incidentally the only fashion for women that never changes is the Salvation Army bonnet. The same style has been in vogue since 1877. Mrs. Rose Taylor collected for the Thanksgiving dinners at the entrance to the Park Street Subway station.

FRIENDS OF ERIN HERE DENOUNCE DE VALERA

New York, Nov. 29.—A resolution condemning De Valera's opposition to the Free State, and deploring the Civil War in Ireland has been adopted by the National Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom, it was announced today. Eighty members of the council were present at the meeting, at which Edward F. McSweeney, of Boston, presided.

Childers Carried Gun Given Him by Collins

London, Nov. 29.—The special correspondent of the Press Association at Dublin says he has been authoritatively informed that the revolver in Erskine Childers' hand when he was captured and for the possession of which he was tried and executed, was presented to him by the late Michael Collins in 1920, for use "in defence of the Irish Republic."

It has transpired, adds the correspondent, that a violent struggle occurred before Childers was disarmed.

Double Package — Double Sealed

Catching the Eye—

IS an old expression for "catching the pocket book"; people are fooled more by their eyes than by their brains.

That coffee should be properly packed is no reason it should be costly packed. You can't eat or drink the package.

If the cost of the package is deducted from the quality of the coffee, there are a lot of people getting poor coffee. Properly packed coffee means a perfect container at a negligible cost.

You will notice that White House Coffee is double-sealed and double-packed. It comes to you in a big square cardboard container that is trifling in cost but mighty scientific in design.

White House Coffee is the finest coffee grown; coffee at its best, whether being measured into the coffee pot or poured, steaming and fragrant, out of it. Just try a pound.

GARDINER DENIES HE EVER MARRIED MARY COAKLEY

give the child my name she would let my sister alone. I gave my name to the child for that reason.

"It was not my child. As a matter of fact, I have a man coming into court at the proper time and tell who is the child's father.

DENIES PAYING BILLS.

"The apartment in which Mary Coakley says she and I lived as man and wife was paid for by my sister. My sister paid for that apartment to keep Mary Coakley's mouth shut. Of course I never paid the woman's bills. I was not her husband. I was not living with her. She was no relation of mine. Why should I pay the bills?

"I never lived at that apartment or anywhere else with Mary Coakley as man and wife. In the first hearing over the guardianship of Dorothy, back in 1915, Mary told in court that I was the father of her child. At that time she did not say I was her husband. She did not prove her statement. I denied it at that time.

WELCOMES INQUIRY.

"When she went so far as to accuse me in open court on the paternity question, why didn't she go ahead then and bring out the story that I was her husband and deserted her and the child? You can bet she would have done it if she had had any such claim on me.

"I do not fear any investigation by a Grand Jury. I will never be convicted or formally charged with bigamy, because I am not guilty."

The New York district attorney's office says that Mary Coakley is expected to call at that office soon for questioning so that her story may be presented to the New York Grand Jury, if necessary.

Gardiner was married about seven or eight years ago to Stella Smith, said to have been a pianist in a moving picture show. He has since lived with Stella Smith Gardiner at Baldwin, Long Island.

Any bigamy charge, if such were brought against Gardiner, would be based on the alleged common law marriage to Mary Coakley and the subsequent marriage to Stella Smith while Mary Coakley was still living. In the New York case of Hayes vs. the People (New York Reports, Vol. 3, page 390) the decision was:

"To support an indictment for bigamy it is a sufficient marriage, in fact, that the parties agree to be husband and wife and live together and recognize each other as such. It is immaterial whether a person who pretended to solemnize the contract was or was not a clergyman or magistrate, or that either party was deceived by his false representations of that character."

COMES LIKE BOMBSHELL.

The story told now by Mary Coakley came like another bombshell today at a time when the Gordon case was apparently marking time between guardianship hearings.

Mary Coakley said recently:

"If I should tell what I know about Jack Gardiner he will never in this world be appointed Dorothy Gordon's guardian."

Just what caused Mary Coakley to reveal her hidden romance and sorrow at this time is a matter of conjecture.

Some may be reminded, by this new turn of the case, of Shakespeare's oft-quoted line:

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

There is no record of a marriage license for Mary Coakley and John D. Gardiner having been issued in New York. But there is a record of a child born to "Mary Gardiner."

The records of St. Michael's Church, on West Thirty-Fourth street, show that a child was christened there, on Aug. 20, 1911, under the name of Elizabeth Evelyn Gardiner.

The records show that the child Elizabeth Evelyn, was born to "Mary Gardiner" in the New York Institution for Women and Children on May 17, 1911. On the certificate the father's name is given as John Gardiner.

Mary Coakley's sister, Mrs. Josephine A. Dalton, of No. 179 West 102nd street, said that Gardiner told her, early in 1911, that he and Mary were married. Later she said, Mary told her about it, and the two lived with her for a time at the Tenth avenue address.

UNCLE THRICE "WEDDED."

Mrs. Dalton acted as godmother to the child at the christening.

Mary Coakley, in telling of her own experiences with Gardiner, said that he had been married before she met him, to a Flossie Kennedy, who has since died.

"I was only a little girl when I went to his sister to take care of little Dorothy Gordon," she said. "I first met Jack there. He began to make love to me, but was very secret about it, as he didn't want his sister to know.

"Sometimes he spoke of running away together, but Mr. and Mrs. Gordon trusted me and depended on me to take care of Dorothy, so I tried to be just a friend to him. Then he married Flossie Kennedy, and for a time I didn't see so much of him.

TOGETHER 3 YEARS.

"Two years later, however, she died, and then he began to make love to me again. I couldn't resist any longer, and I finally agreed to be his wife. He didn't want his sister to know, or Mr. Gordon, because he thought they wouldn't like it, and might stop giving him money.

"We left his sister's home together and came to New York. Jack didn't have enough money to buy furniture, so I gave him some. We got our apartment on Tenth avenue together, and lived in New York for three years.

"Finally one day Jack came in and told me he didn't care for me any more. Then he walked out.

"I was desperate. I wanted to die, but I couldn't for the baby's sake. So I tried to get some washing and ironing to do, and I managed to exist and feed the child.

"I didn't dare try to make Jack come back, as I knew that if I did he would tell all he knew about Dorothy Gordon's mother and Mr. Gordon, as he had often threatened to do. By and by I returned to Dorothy's parents, who had found out where I was, and went to live with them."

3 Romances Played Their Part in Life of Dorothy's Uncle

The romance and marriage complex in the life of John D. Gardiner, uncle of Dorothy Gordon, as now set forth, assumes the following schedule:

John D. Gardiner

Gardiner met Mary Coakley a short time prior to 1905, when she came to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner Gordon, Gardiner's sister, to take care of little Dorothy at Baldwin, L. I.

Gardiner, according to Mary Coakley, made secret love to Mary, even suggesting they elope.

1905—Gardiner suddenly married Flossie Kennedy.

1907—Flossie Kennedy Gardiner died, leaving a son now living.

Gardiner renewed his court to Mary Coakley, the latter says.

1910 (about)—Gardiner and Mary Coakley started living together as man and wife (New York common law marriage), according to Mary Coakley.

May 17, 1911—Baby girl born at New York Institution for Women and Children. Mother's name given as Mary Gardiner; father's name as John Gardiner. Mary Coakley says this is their child, now eleven years and six months old.

August 18, 1911—Baby was christened Elizabeth Evelyn Gardiner, after Dorothy Gordon's mother, by the Rev. Father James M. Winters at St. Michael's Church, Manhattan.

Thanksgiving time, 1913—Gardiner abandoned his common law wife and baby, according to Mary Coakley.

BACK BAY MAN TAKEN IN 2 LIQUOR RAIDS

Police of Station 16 who raided the apartment of Victor Gordon at No. 47 Batavia street, Back Bay, and seized a quantity of liquor, were surprised several hours later, on visiting an apartment at Nos. 16-20 Westland avenue, on a similar errand to find Gordon there also conducting that place. In Roxbury Court, Gordon was found guilty on one of the two counts against him for keeping and exposing liquor and fined $50.

Prince Andrew May Next Be Tried

Athens, Nov. 29 (By International News Service). — Diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Greece were broken off today when the British minister, F. O. Lindley obtained his passports at the Greek Foreign Office and departed for home because of the execution of five former Greek ministers.

It is reported that Prince Andrew and other former ministers in the government under Constantine will be placed on trial.

for me to see him more than once or twice a month, but I thought differently so I just brought Robert down to Massachusetts to live with me and here he is going to stay," Mrs. St. Clair emphatically stated.

Mrs. St. Clair married Robert St. Clair, son of a wealthy Laconia, N. H. hosiery manufacturer. "My husband and I couldn't agree, so we parted and the son staid with the grandparents in spite of my entreaties," she said.

"All reports that I kidnapped the boy are absured. His father, who doesn't want him, knew where the boy was and who was with him. I do not know why I can't have my own son without being accused of kidnapping."

In Laconia, efforts are being made to hush up the affair. Divorce suits filed by St. Clair and his wife have been "dismissed without prejudice" by attorneys, thus taking the custody of the boy out of the divorce courts. A petition may be presented by the father's attorney asking that the child be placed in charge of its grandparents, but Mrs. St. Clair says she will fight any such petition to the bitter end.

WALDORF SYSTEM INCORPORATED — Waldorf Lunch

Why—

We are putting the New Waldorf Seal on our Windows

When you see this seal on a lunch room window, we want it to remind you of the three great fundamentals on which the Waldorf success is built —Quality, Cleanliness, and Service.

By Quality we mean a careful supervision of all the ingredients that go into every dish which is served at the Waldorf.

By Cleanliness we mean the care our employees give to their personal appearance and to the sanitary condition of the lunch rooms.

By Service we mean the thoughtful courtesy in all Departments which is the Waldorf rule.

That's what it means when you see the Waldorf Seal on a lunch room window.

P. E. W.

That's what we spend each year in keeping the Waldorf Lunches spotlessly clean for you.

$150,000 buys 500,000 pounds of cleaning powder! An enormous quantity of mops, brooms, cleaning cloths, etc. All used to keep up the Waldorf standard of absolute cleanliness.

You'll find this bright, attractive cleanliness adds a lot to the pleasure of eating at the Waldorf.

CHILDREN TO PRESENT PANTOMIME TO AID CHRISTMAS FUND

DESTITUTE WORLD WAR VETERANS ASK FOOD

Hundreds of tickets have been sold for the charity ball and concert to be held in Copley-Plaza Hotel ballroom on Monday evening, December 18, in aid of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund.

This big affair will be conducted under the joint auspices of Miss Helen M. Roche, organist of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, and the Madame Lyman Dancing School for Stage Children, with studios at No. 831 Massachusetts avenue and No. 250 Huntington avenue.

Many celebrities are expected to attend the ball, including Governor Channing H. Cox, Mayor James M. Curley and family, and General Clarence R. Edwards.

The Copley-Plaza Hotel Orchestra of twelve musicians has been especially engaged to play during both the entertainment program and for general dancing. The entertainment will be from 8 to 10 p. m. and dancing will follow until 1 a. m.

HARD AT WORK.

Scores of persons under the direction of Miss Roche and Madame Lyman are working untiringly to make the charity ball a success. These workers include seventy five pupils of the Madame Lyman School who will appear in a spectacular pantomime entitled: "The Christmas Spirit." The children are being coached for this big number by Miss Alice Webb of Brookline, a talented elocution teacher of the Lyman School, who will play the role of "Mother" in the fantasy.

"Baby" Josephine Leonard of South Boston is to be featured in this pantomime as one of the needy children . . . are made happy through the medium of the American's Christmas Fund. "Baby" Leonard is a talented seven year old child whose wonderful interpretive work has been witnessed by hundreds of New England audiences. She has aided the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund during the past three years by contributing her services to many charity entertainments in behalf of the fund and is as widely known locally as many professional stars.

This clever little kiddie has a great future before her in the opinion of her friends.

Another child who will be featured in the pantomime is "Baby" Eleanor Ingrid Medford, who will also play the role of a poor child in distress. She and "Baby" Leonard will do one or more double numbers in the vaudeville program. These two children are the youngest kiddies in New England who give exhibitions of ballroom dancing.

Because of the large number of children who will appear in the pantomime a specially constructed stage will be used in order that every person attending may have a good opportunity to witness their work.

Tickets for the ball may be obtained by telephoning Miss Roche at South Boston 1535 M. or Madame Lyman at Copley 4842 R or from the numerous parents of either of these talented teachers.

TO AID VETERANS

Many destitute world war veterans who have been unable to obtain regular employment are to be assisted by the American's Christmas Fund.

Several pathetic letters from veterans and their families have reached the Christmas Fund Editor. One from Cambridge reads as follows: "I am a widow and unable to work. I have a son who is a war veteran and was wounded. I would be very thankful for a Christmas dinner. I have never asked for help before and hope you will remember me."

A letter received from Brighton reads as follows: "I am hoping you won't forget me this Christmas. I am the oldest of four children. I would like it if you would send a dinner to us. My mother is dead for four years and my father is out of work for three months."

A letter from East Boston reads "Please send me a basket this Christmas. It is the first time I have asked for one. My boy, twelve years old, and I live with my niece who is very poor and has three children. I have no means of support, being an invalid and depending on her for food and shelter. I get clothes from kind neighbors. I surely will be happy and very thankful to receive one."

OUT OF WORK.

A letter received from Charlestown reads: "I am a little girl, twelve years old and my mother has five children. I am the oldest and we have a baby fifteen months old. My father has been out of work for a long time and just started to work another job but got hurt, so it looks to us as if we will have no Christmas and my little brother is sick and has been sick all Summer, and mamma cannot go to work as she cannot get any. She has been trying every night for work in the chuildings as that is about the best time for her. I hope we will not be forgotten for my mother's sake or we will not have any Christmas."

Mayor Edward W. Quinn, in sending in his annual contribution to the American's Fund, wrote: "I am inclosing check for $10.00 to help swell the proceeds.

"I am in a position to know of the praiseworthy work being done by your newspaper to make so many, many families happy, by giving them baskets filled with good things for Christmas.

"The Boston American is doing a real work in calling on our citizens to heed the appeal of the less fortunate, and I want to commend you for such a worthy spirit."

BUSINESS MEN HELP.

A little chap, who lives on Tremont street, in the South End, sent $1.00 and asked that it be credited to "H. R." In writing for him, his mother said: "It is not much, but I am five years of age and each Christmas since my birth my daddy has sent in this small donation. I wish you much success."

Many business men continue to subscribe to the fund. One of the latest to contribute is Wendell Endicott, a Boston leather merchant, who sent $5.00.

Paul D. Carney, in sending a donation from the employes of the Special Delivery Section, Boston Postoffice, wrote, "Enclosed please find money order for $7.50, the contribution of the employes of the Special Delivery Section of the Boston Postoffice. With seasons' greetings for the success of this drive, we, the Employes of the Special Delivery Section, Boston Postoffice."

Robert Treat Paine, a leading Bostonian, who has annually contributed to the fund, sent a check for $5.00.

Another prominent Bostonian is the person of Galen L. Stone enclosed check for $250.00

Edgar E. B. Brown, another leading Boston business man, sent $25

A prominent legislator who has been an annual contributor sent $25.00 with the request that it be listed as coming from "A Friend"

Other attractions will include a cabaret. Some of the entertainers are Miss Elaine Thrower, Miss Helen Roche, Herbert Arvidson and Jos. Madden. Billie McBride's jazz band will supply music for dancing.

The Norcross Associates is one of the most prominent organizations in South Boston, and has pledged its support in aid of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund.

The dance committee includes William J. Hennessey, chairman, Leo Connors, Jackie White, Joseph M. Williams, George A. Burke, Timothy McAuliffe, Fred Croake and Joseph Burke.

Why Have a Sour Stomach

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Meals Insure a Sweet Stomach From All Dyspeptic Distresses.

You have probably been through the experience when your stomach went sour and filled with gas and nothing at hand to give relief. And after two or three days you got over it. It took that time for the stomach to right itself naturally. But why go through such misery? If you chew one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating you can have pie and cheese, doughnuts baked beans, steak and fried onions, sausage and so on for your three meals a day and not have a sour stomach with gas belching fullness pressure and the misery that comes from an acid stomach due to indigestion. The reason is that these tablets supply the stomach with an alkaline effect that neutralizes the acid hence the stomach becomes calm and sweet. If you feel you are a chronic dyspeptic and are afraid to eat, get 50 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets of any druggist and get back into your eating status.

PRIZE CONTEST FOR STUDENTS OF MUSIC

As an incentive to creating interest among music students in the interpretative scores to accompany motion pictures, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through J. Lourie Finfer, manager of the Modern and Beacon Theatres, has offered a prize of $100 to the student of the New England Conservatory of Music who submits the best music score on the new photoplay, "The Headless Horseman," a picturization of Washington Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

Ralph L. Flanders, general manager of the Conservatory, has entered heartily into the conduct of the contest, and a projection machine will be installed in Jordan Hall, where the picture will be run off for the competing students. It is not stipulated in the contest that original musical compositions are required, but rather that recognized works be utilized.

From the music scores submitted by the students five will be selected by a committee headed by George W. Chadwick, Frederick S. Converse and another member of the faculty who has had practical experience in theatrical work. The winner will be chosen from the five scores selected.

It is expected that the five selected scores will be available to be played by the organs at the Modern and Beacon Theatres where the picture will be shown next week.

Sure Way to Get Rid Of Dandruff "Use Liquid Arvon"

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and scratching of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

500 Drug Stores in New York Run by Ex-Saloon Men

New York — Twenty per cent. of the more than 5,000 drug stores in New York city owned by men who are not registered pharmacists are operated solely for the purpose of selling liquor, Dr. Jacob Diner of No. 344 West Eighty-fifth street, president of the New York State Pharmaceutical Association and dean of the College of Pharmacy at Fordham University, said yesterday.

"At least 500 former saloon keepers have opened drug stores in New York since the enactment of the Volstead law," he added.

"A good portion of the poison liquor now being sold in this city is supplied by the 'blind tiger' drug stores."

1 KILLED, 2 HURT, AS ENGINE BLOWS UP

Dayton, O., Nov. 29—One man was killed and two injured, one probably fatally when the boiler of the locomotive hauling an extra freight train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, exploded today near Kilkare Park.

The dead man was Ed Kimmear Dayton, Engineer, burned, and not expected to live, and Charles Brown Dayton, head brakeman, burned, and one arm broken expected to recover.

Camden Man's Amazing Message to Rheumatics

After Suffering Intense Agony for Many Years—He Wants to Tell Others.

Dr. Brigg said: "I simply had to write and tell you what your wonderful Camphorole has done for me. For many years I suffered the tortures of Rheumatism as only those who have it know. At the same time I had a terrible itch and, over it with sores, the shark p he were so severe, I could not even bear to get in bed and scratch. It almost drove me crazy. I tried doctor after doctor and all sorts of medicines I was told to take all I could, no more. I could not bend my knees or elbows. I was bitter by trade and had to give up my work losing your advertisement in the paper, I thought I would take another chance and sent for Dr. Brigg's Camphorole. You can imagine my joy and delight when Camphorole started to get better right away. After using two jars of Camphorole I was well and happy and have gone back to work. That was almost two years ago and I have had no return. After all the years I suffered I feel good to be well again." Robert W. Terrell, 1917 High St., Camden, N. J.

GIRLS PERJURE THEIR SOULS, SAID JUDGE

Lawrence, Nov. 29.—Mary Jane Boulay, twenty, of Haverhill, and Alfreda Brisson, eighteen, of Lewiston, Me., who when arrested in a raid accused a Lawrence traffic officer, were sentenced to Sherborn Prison.

Following a severe denunciation of the two girls for "framing" Louis Fulgenait, the accused policeman, Judge Mahoney acquitted the latter.

The Boulay girl retracted on the stand the story she told to the jury in which she implicated the officer and admitted that a Federal revenue officer was the man she should have accused.

Arthur Boidue, brother-in-law of the Boulay girl, who was accused by the Brisson girl, defaulted bail.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Woman Relied Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Emporia, Kansas.—"I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines years ago when I was a girl. For several years I had severe pains at menstrual periods, making me very weak and interfering with my regular duties. I tried several remedies without obtaining relief. I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and it restored me to normal health. I often have occasion and do recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to my own. You may use these facts as a testimonial."—Eva Alexander, 218 Union St., Emporia, Kansas.

There are many women who first used our Vegetable Compound during their girlhood days. They found it a valuable help during trying periods. In later years they use it whenever they feel those annoying symptoms which women often have.

It is prepared carefully from medicinal plants, whose properties are especially adapted to correct the troubles women have.

Strong Faith in PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Albert Huet, 100 Prospect St., South Manchester, Conn., convinced that it saved her life, writes:

"I had cancer of the stomach, bowels and liver. Was confined to my bed. I have taken Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin and to-day thank God for a good stomach and appetite. My faith is strong that Pe-ru-na is a life saver. I advise my friends daily to use Pe-ru-na and many have been helped."

Pe-ru-na is backed by the verdict of two generations, more than fifty years of success.

MOVIE NEWS and NOTES

HENRY HULL is in pictures again—or, at least, he will be at the end of the present week when he retires from the cast of "The Cat and the Canary" to play the principal role in a new comedy photoplay, "Shakespeare was Right." Mr. Hull has flitted back and forth between pictures and the speaking stage several times, his most recent screen appearance being in "One Exciting Night," now being shown at Tremont Temple.

Henry Hull

While making this picture he continued his regular engagement with "The Cat and the Canary" in New York, and now that the play is leaving Broadway for the road Mr. Hull concludes that he would prefer to remain in New York and act before a camera. Work on "Shakespeare Was Right" will begin within a fortnight.

MAKES FIRST FLIGHT.

TROY HARRIS, a movie hero, made his first flight in an aeroplane in preparation for some of the scenes of "The Go Getter," a Cosmopolitan picturization of a Peter B. Kyne story directed by J. Stuart Blackton. The role Harries portrays in the picture calls for some aerial stunts.

NEILAN HAS NEW PLANS.

INDICATIONS are that Marshall Neilan, who has just completed his last picture of his Rivieras "The Strangers' Banquet" in association with Goldwyn, may make one more picture before beginning photography on Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

"VILLAINS" AGAIN.

HALLAM COOLEY, who "villained" for Elaine Hammerstein in "One Week of Love" is performing a similar function in Tom Forman's new production, "Are You a Failure?," a comedy drama by Larry Evans. Marie Bellamy and Lloyd Hughes are also in the cast.

"IF WINTER COMES"

VIRGINIA LEE, who has been seen in a number of recent successes plays a prominent role in the film version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "If Winter Comes," according to an announcement just issued by the William Fox office.

LANCASTER THEATRE

THE new bill at the Lancaster Theatre this week brought Milton Ellis and Wanda Hawley to that house in the spirited photoplay "Burning Sands." The picture is the leading feature of a long program which also presented "Song of Life" and the usual news and comedy films.

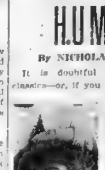
"CAMILLE" OF SOREL IS HUMAN

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It is doubtful if any of the classics—or, if you prefer, the semi-classics—make a greater appeal to playgoers than "Camille," which Mlle. Sorel and her players from Comedie Fran-caise gave upon the stage at the Boston Opera House last evening.



Cecile Sorel.

"Camille" has been the favorite of the player and the playgoer alike, and the last generation has witnessed this great tragedy in many forms of interpretation by many artists. There is probably no character of the modern stage that has enjoyed—or suffered—a more varied assortment of interpretations than the unhappy Marguerite who last evening gave Mlle. Sorel another opportunity to show the quality of her art.

FOLLOWS FAMILIAR PATHS.

In many respects the Marguerite of Sorel followed familiar paths, with moods and passions closely related to those that have been exhibited by distinguished artists of the past, with the slight difference that perhaps she was a bit more human, according to latter day standards, than the thin and fragile Bernhardt and unquestionably more womanly than the lady played so robustly by Nethersole.

"Camille" is a play that in these highly colored days of the drama invites comparisons and yet, perhaps, nothing could be more unfair to this newest of our artistic visitors than to attempt to measure the quality of her labors by the scores or so of Marguerites that have almost regularly graced the local stage. Sorel, last night, was intensely human. Her lighter moments caught you with a ring that was true, and her moments of pathos dug deep into your heart. Perhaps the most noticeable thing about Sorel's Marguerite was the fact that she did not begin to whine and die at the beginning of the play but waited until her final scene with Armand, when she could suddenly and gracefully collapse and pass away in his arms. In this one lapse of interpretation alone Sorel gave us a new Marguerite. As a matter of fact there was a note of new generalization that she was feeling pretty well thank you, up to the last ten minutes of play.

HAS GOOD SUPPORT.

In any event, Sorel will be remembered as a Marguerite with a distinctly human touch—more or less familiar in many ways to the Marguerites that have already moved across the local stage, but still individual in most respects.

Of the Armand of Alexandre Lambert and the Georges Duval of Louis Ravet playgoers should find much to commend. They gave a full measure of support to Mlle. Sorel's fine performance.

RUSSIAN PIANIST GIVES RECITAL

Another Russian pianist—how many this season so far?—appeared at Steinert Hall last night and gave a recital. He is Alexander Chigrinsky and it seems he is celebrated as well as Russian.

Mr. Chigrinsky gave a program that would tax the most energetic artist. But it did not seem to be too much for him. He continued right down the line, starting with the Handel Harmonious Blacksmith and proceeded through two Scarlatti numbers, then on to the Beethoven "Moonlight Sonata" and from that on to the end he played a miscellaneous collection, which included such modern composers as Paderewski and Rachmaninoff. To top off the whole Mr. Chigrinsky finished up with the Liszt Campanella."

There is this to be said of Alexander Chigrinsky, his technic is good and he is in the sureness of a mechanism, devoid. But there is that intangible line where too much technic ceases to be a virtue and has fated to obstruct. His phrasing is uninteresting and his playing is monotonous.

TWICE DESERTED, BOSTON WOMAN LOSES HER MIND

MARRIED 2ND TIME THINKING 1ST DEAD

Mother Now Seeks Annulment of Second Venture for Daughter in Asylum

A strange, bizarre romance that reaches from a physician's office in Chicago to the Boston State Insane Hospital, in Mattapan, was revealed when Mrs. Katherine A. Nye of No. 70 Pinckney street, Beacon Hill filed papers seeking the annulment of the second marriage of her daughter, Ethel.

Involved in the weird tangle which the filing of the papers brought to light are the daughter, who is now confined in the asylum as an insane person; Dr. John W. Lyman, to whom she was married in 1915 and William A. French of Lowell, to whom she was married two years ago.

FIRST HUSBAND FOUND.

Dr. Lyman, the first husband, was thought dead when the second ceremony was performed. His existence was discovered only when Attorney Albert Proctor, representing the mother, began an investigation so that Mrs. Nye might be appointed her daughter's guardian.

The daughter, Ethel, is now thirty-five years old. She has been in the asylum since last June. Each of her husbands, in turn, deserted her and left her alone with her mother, and these desertions are believed largely responsible for the derangement of her mind.

In 1915, when she married Dr Lyman, Ethel went to live with him at No 208 Allston street, Brighton. Shortly after the marriage her mind was slightly affected, and she entered the Psycopathic Hospital for a short period, emerging a month or so later as cured.

BELIEVED DOCTOR DEAD.

Then, in 1918, Dr. Lyman disappeared. Search was made high and low, but no trace of him could be found. For various reasons, Ethel and her mother believed him dead.

A year later the wife met French, who was then only twenty years old. After a short courtship she consented to marry him, convinced that her first husband had died.

The marriage lasted approximately three years. At no time did it run very smoothly, it is said, and last June Ethel noticed a recurrence of the mental affliction that had caused her to enter the Psycopathic Hospital before.

FRENCH DISAPPEARS.

Then French disappeared. The shock of his departure was too much, and Mrs. French lost her mind. She was sent to the State Hospital, and Mrs. Nye began to take steps to be appointed her guardian.

Attorney Proctor found that he must notify Ethel's husband of the guardianship proceedings. He decided to find out for sure that Dr. Lyman was actually dead, and began an investigation.

This investigation carried him to Chicago, where he found the physician working on a medical treatise.

Dr. Lyman had been stricken with amnesia. That, four years ago, had caused him to wander away from his home. He could remember nothing of what had happened before that date, and did not know that he was married.

TURKEY TIME AT THE MARKET AND AT CHARITY HEADQUARTERS

FOOD BASKETS DISTRIBUTED TO THE POOR

Distribution of Thanksgiving baskets by the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America to deserving cases of poor people, consisting of the shut-ins, emergency cases and last-minute calls, took place today from the headquarters of the two organizations.

At the Salvation Army headquarters on East Brookline street, Mrs. McIntyre, wife of Colonel McIntyre, who was in charge of the distribution, sent out the Army trucks with more than 200 building baskets to all parts of the city where distress calls were received. In each basket was a liberal supply of food, enough to feed an ordinary family of six or eight throughout the day. Lining the bottom of the baskets were an assortment of vegetables, consisting of potatoes, onion, turnips, with apples and oranges, followed by cans of corn, peas and evaporated milk, packages of tea and coffee, sugar, bread and butter, the whole topped off with a good sized fowl.

The distribution is intended for those families and children who will be unable to attend the mammoth Thanksgiving dinner to be given by the Army tomorrow in Ford Hall, where more than one thousand children will be guests of the Army.

At the Volunteers of America headquarters on Howard street, West End, between 400 and 500 baskets were given out by Colonel Walter Dunnan of the organization to persons who called from all sections of the city.

SCHNEIDER POPULAR, BUT GETS 2 MONTHS

Patrolman John Saxton, who lives at No. 11 Marbie street, Roxbury, became weary of persons knocking at his door inquiring for "Mr. Schneider." Harris Schneider, a tailor, with a shop at No. 766 Shawmut avenue, lives beneath the officer. Saxton investigated the popularity of Schneider.

As a result, Schneider's home and the tailor shop were raided. He was charged with keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale at each place.

He was found guilty in Roxbury Court today and sentenced to two months. He appealed.

COURT FREES DEATH CAR DRIVER

Joseph C. McNally of No. 8 Letter line terrace, Dorchester driver of an automobile in which Joseph T. Ford, assistant paymaster for the City of Boston, was killed the night of November 20 in Dedham, was discharged in Dedham Court today on a complaint of having been under the influence of liquor at the time of the crash.

Patrolman Warren T. [illegible] on two police and one civilian witness besides himself in effort to get a conviction, but the court ruled that was reasonable doubt and gave McNally the benefit of it.

McNally admitted that he had a drink of "moonshine" forty minutes prior to the time the car crashed into a fence. But, he declared, he was not under the "influence of liquor."

William Bowman, third man in the car, was found guilty of being intoxicated. He was fined $[illegible] and has first offence.

The accident, according to McNally, occurred because the road was wet and slippery and the street lighting dim.

INTERCITY TRUST CO. BANNED

Public Utilities Board Charges Fraudulent Methods of Business

The Inter City Trust Company of No. 31 Boylston street today was barred by the Public Utilities Commission from selling its stock in this State.

The commission had revoked the license of the Inter City Trust Sale Company, the selling organization of the parent company, anw twenty agents some time ago.

The commissioners' report says: "This company has been paying dividends that had not been earned in order to promote the sale of [illegible] certificates. This alone, we think, justifies us in the conclusion that the sale of its securities is fraudulent or would result in fraud."

Investigation disclosed that an arrangement existed between the company and Henry Cragor of New York city to sell 30,000 shares with a par value of $10, and the report says:

"A considerable number of these shares were sold at $18 each. The sales were being effected through false and fraudulent representations by agents of Cragor."

The Inter City Trust was organized to promote realty projects. Scheland ontague was head of it in Boston and Harry A. [illegible], broker, headed the sales organization.

The petition to the commission was signed by Mrs. Mabel W. Neves of the Hotel Priscilla who invested $25,000.

ENGINEER HELD FOR DEATHS

Negligence Caused Killing of Two at Avon, Judge Marden Decides

"Culpable negligence" was responsible for the death of Brooks D. Elliott and Raymond S. Blodgett, who were killed at the Avon railroad station on October 19, according to the finding of Judge Oscar Marden of Stoughton District Court.

Judge Marden made his finding today, following the inquest and he ruled Engineer Matthew Doran of the New Haven road as the "culpable person."

Blodgett, who was married, was on his way home from work. He stepped from the Boston Boat train, the last of a dozen persons to [illegible]. Elliott was on his way to work in Boston and crossed the platform toward the train.

Neither, apparently saw the oncoming express train and both were instantly killed under the engine. At the time added parties was given to the matter when it became known that Elliott was to have married Miss Dorothy Cleary of West Roxbury next June.

PREFERRED TO SEE WOODHOUSE 'DIG DITCHES'

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 29.—"I would have been very glad if Douglas would have gone to work digging in a ditch," said Mrs. Mary L. Wood house, wife of the millionaire banker, today when testifying as the last witness for the defense in the million-dollar alienation suit brought by her son's wife, Dorrit Stevens Wood house, in County Court here.

Mrs. Woodhouse had been asked if she had ever done anything to prevent Douglas from earning his livelihood.

Mrs. Woodhouse when asked if she did anything to encourage Douglas in his trip to Nevada for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, replied, "I certainly did not. I don't believe in divorce."

HER CONSCIENCE CLEAR.

On first taking the stand Mrs. Woodhouse testified that the first she learned of Douglas' relations with Mrs. McClellan was when the alienation suit was brought.

She stated that Douglas was never told by her, and she was sure never by his father, that in the case of his marriage to Dorrit any financial support would be withdrawn from him. "We had nothing to do with it," was her testimony.

When asked by Attorney Darling if she ever did anything to break up the relations between Dorrit and Douglas, Mrs. Woodhouse replied: "My conscience is clear on that subject. I never did anything by word or deed which would serve to spoil their happiness."

SAW NOTHING IMPROPER.

Mrs. Woodhouse, on cross-examination stated that she was not impressed that anything out of the ordinary was taking place in Washington when Douglas brought Lucien McClellan to the apartments of herself and her husband and introduced the young woman to them. She admitted that later, when at the young people were at Chatham she thought it would be nice to invite Lillian over of the week end as he was in the vicinity.

She did not approve of his sporting career of 1919, nor did his father. They would have liked to have Douglas settle and live a happy life.

CHAPMAN AND WILLIAMS BATTLE AT ARMORY A. A. TONIGHT

PUNCHER AND BOXER IN BIG RING TEST

By JACK CONWAY

Featherweights will hold the stage when Red Chapman and Freddy Williams, both of Dorchester, battle in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tonight.

The rivals are rated with the leading featherweights in the country and are expected to furnish a thrilling engagement. Chapman recently won two feature matches at Newark, returned home and bested Mickey Travers and is now angling for a tussle with Johnny Kilbane, world's featherweight champion.

Williams, like Chapman, has been winning steadily. He recently returned to Boston after a triumphal tour to the Philippines and California and is now out to bang his way to the front ranks of the feather weight division.

It is natural that Williams should first desire to dispose of Chapman. These boys are Dorchester rivals. There has been considerable feeling between their camp followers and as a result the meeting was arranged. Chapman is aggressive and a great puncher. He is also wise to get into position to hit.

Williams is fast and clever and can box. All of which should result in a lively match. Chapman is our selection to win.

The semi-final of ten rounds will bring together Freddy Madden of East Boston and Henry Ford of the North End. These youths are also featherweights and are expected to put up a rapid-fire battle.

A couple of eight-rounders will complete the card.

The Naumkeag A. A. of Salem will be the scene of a big holiday boxing show tomorrow afternoon. Festivities get under way at 3.15. The feature match of ten rounds will bring together Tommy Nee of South Boston and Red Barrett of Fall River. The match is for the New England flyweight championship and is expected to furnish a flock of thrills.

Buddy Clark, the best boxer developed in Salem in a long time, will oppose Johny Scully in the semi-final.

Gunboat Jack and Young Melton each will box six rounds, as will Johnny Goslyn and Ramie Melkanson.

ABE FRIEDMAN DEMANDS BOUT WITH VILLA

Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight champion, after seeing Pancho Villa displaying his wares in the boxing parade of Boston at the Boston Arena, feels more confident than ever that he can defeat the little Filipino. Friedman thinks that Montreal did not fight the little dynamo from the Philippine Islands in the right way. Instead of boxing Villa, Montreal stood flat footed and tried to out general the little whirlwind.

Friedman is willing to meet Villa on the same terms as Montreal did, and the sooner some matchmaker ties up the match, the better Friedman will feel about it. The New England bantamweight king has won two referee decisions over Young Montreal, three decisions over Irish Johnny Curtin, and decisions over Danny Edwards, Frankie Jerome, Frankie Curry, Roy Moore, Joe O'Donnell, Jabas White and newspaper decisions over Joe Lynch and Pete Herman. Eddie Mack thinks that Friedman is the logical opponent for the next battle with Pancho Villa.

Willie Harmon, the crack 140-pounder, is willing to meet any welterweight in the country. He would like nothing better than to meet Nate Siegel. As Siegel is about the same weight and same type of fighter it should be a good match for some of the clubs.

DILBOY POST HAS SHOW ON DEC. 7

On December 7 the George Dilboy Post, V. F. W., will stage its regular amateur boxing tournament in K. of C. Hall, Somerville.

Although it will be preceded by a couple of amateur tournaments earlier in the week, the entry list contains the names of the best performers in each of the following classes that will be contested: 112, 126, 135 and 147 pounds, and Lightweight class.

The last class promises to be a corker from the caliber of the entrants that have intimated their desire to compete. This is the first show staged by this post but included this class, and it was not after the many requests from the heavy boys that the committee decided to include it in the tournament.

Young Zarke, the 112 pound champion from Manchester, N. H., who cleaned up everything in his class at the last two tournaments staged by this post, is expected to appear. This youngster, unknown to any of the followers of the purse, has only fought around Greater Boston in his two appearances for Dilboy Post, but his performances have made him a great favorite with the fans.

Entries will close December 1 with George A. Bowles, Room 3, K. of C. Building, Somerville.

POLISH STAR IN HOLIDAY MAT CARNIVAL

Stanley Stasiak, latest wrestling sensation, will appear in one of the star bouts at the wrestling carnival to be staged by the Old Howard management at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Stasiak has displayed more grappling ability than any Polish wrestler since the Zbyesko brothers reached the peak of their mat ability. He is a big, powerful fellow with a world of natural ability as well as a fine knowledge of the mat game.

The Polish hercules will receive a real test when he collides with Ivan Michaloff, the human spring, in a finish match. Ivan is one of the best of the grapplers now in this country and figures he is too classy for Stasiak.

There is also considerable interest in the finish match between Young Maris, Italian star, and George Williams, German giant.

The feature bout will bring together George Calza, Ital an heavyweight champion, and Frank Yusko, indefeated Lithuanian. This is one of the toughest matches that could be arranged. Neither wrestler has ever lost in Boston and as a result he battling is sure to be fast.

Calza showed remarkable form in his recent winning match with Cliff Binckley and is confident he will win over Yusko. The latter is just as certain that the Italian champion will go down to defeat.

A. SAPP'S FABLES

ONCE there was a guy who bought himself a second hand Ford wagon. It ran like a hook, never stopped going. He never took it into the repair shop, and he never broke down on the road, or had any blowouts. His lights didn't go bad, and his horn never went back on him. And it didn't stall once in traffic, or anything.

Moral—He sold it the next day.

CLOSING GAMES OF GRID SEASON PROMISE BIG SURPRISES

TURKEY DAY CROWDED WITH STAR CONTESTS

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Football's final big solurge tomorrow afternoo presents the prognosticator with the same tough task that has been his lot throughout this most unusual season.

Upsets threaten on every hand for the "versuses" all the way down the day's schedule separate very evenly matched foes, and the favorites on form may prove anything but the ultimate victors.

Cornell's vigorous slapping of all foes thus far encountered and its generally all-around excellent record automatically mark Gil Dobie's team a favorite over Pennsylvania. The latter, however, is a hard playing eleven whose goal line seldom has been crossed and then only with the greatest difficulty, and it is well within the range of possibility for the Red and Blue to triumph.

Several All America candidates will perform in this contest They are: Kaw, a halfback; Pfann, a quarterback, and Hanson, a tackle on the Ithacan team who must be reckoned with by the All selectors, and Miller a halfback; Hamer a fullback and Thurman a tackle on the Penny array who have been making strenuous bids for high individual ranking.

Glenn Warner's Eleven Will Rule Favorite

In the Pittsburgh-Penn State clash Glenn Warner's team, which has staged a brilliant comeback since its successive defeats by West Virginia and Washington and Jefferson, will rule the odds on team, but the odds will be mighty slight and a Penn State victory would not come as a great shock to those who have followed the two elevens.

Sack, a giant guard, Bower, an able centre, Williams, an end, and Hewitt, a fullback on the Pitt team, and McMahon, a tackle; Bedenk, a guard; Wilson, a halfback and Palm, quarterback on Penn State are the All-America possibilities engaging in this battle.

West Virginia Choice Over the Generals

At Morgantown, where West Virginia rules the pick over Washington and Jefferson, there also is the possibility of an upset, but if things go according to Hoyle, "Cutie" Spears, one-time Dartmouth coach, will have an unmatched record for the season

The single New England eleven engaged in a holiday battle is Coach Keady's Vermont team, which has journeyed to Detroit for its final 1922 engagement. Undoubtedly the Auto City eleven, playing in its home city, will carry the heaviest coin, but if Vermont plays up to its possibilities, Detroit, barely recovered from its W. & J. game of last Saturday, is apt to find itself on the small end of the score

Centre Has Lost Claim to the Southern Title

Centre College, having been defeated by Alabama, has lost its chance to claim the Southern title this year and, because of that fact, the Georgia Tech-Auburn engagement at Atlanta looms as the sure enough World's Series of the South.

Georgia Tech will enter the game a favorite but may not leave it as such for the Auburn eleven is a powerful, able array and is determined that Georgia Tech's annual climb to the top of the heap will cease with tomorrow's game.

Vanderbilt, unbeaten thus far this season, and having plowed Michigan a 0 to 0 tie, is expected to continue its great record against the University of the South.

Notre Dame Invariably Takes Measure of Nebraska

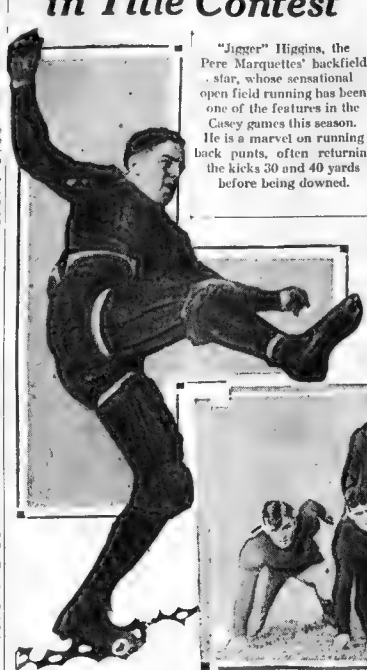
Notre Dame almost invariably takes the measure of Nebraska and expects to do so tomorrow, although Nebraska, except for its defeat by Syracuse, has been offering a great brand of football. Virginia Military and the University of Virginia, rule the respective favorites over Virginia Poly and North Carolina Georgetown should beat George Washington in the city championship game at the Polo Grounds but gate is decidedly the pick over Columbia

In all the last games, as well as in Centre's clash with South Carolina, possible All-America men will be performing, and whether their names will appear on the first, second or third honor elevens, or in the honorable mention list, will be determined on their showing

Parker's Picks

Cornell to beat Pennsylvania.
Pittsburgh to beat Penn State.
West Virginia to beat Washington and Jefferson.
Colgate to beat Columbia.
Notre Dame to beat Nebraska.
Vermont to beat Detroit.
Virginia Military to beat Virginia Polytechnic.
Centre to beat South Carolina.
Georgia Tech to beat Auburn.
Georgetown to beat George Washington.
Vanderbilt to beat University of the South.
Virginia to beat North Carolina.

Casey Grid Stars in Title Contest



"Jigger" Higgins, the Pere Marquettes' backfield star, whose sensational open field running has been one of the features in the Casey games this season. He is a marvel on running back punts, often returning the kicks 30 and 40 yards before being downed.

All preparations have been made for the annual football game between the Fitton A. C. of East Boston and the Pere Marquette, K. C., of South Boston at Fenway Park Thanksgiving afternoon at 2 P. M.

Both teams include the pick of the semi-pro football teams in New England and boast of victories over the best of the teams around

The Fittons are handicapped, as they haven't a home field. They must play all their games away from home, and yet have been successful in all except two in the past four years. So far this season they have played seven games, won six and lost one, that to the Cambridge A. I. They defeated the Cambridge team in earlier in the season

The winner will play either the Chelsea Militarcans or the Cambridge Legion. Both have been persistent challengers

The Fittons have played together as a unit for the past four years and in that time have won thirty-one games, lost two and were tied once. The team is coached by "Skip" Sherlock, former Commerce High coach He is assisted by "Bill" McCarthy, also of Commerce. The team is composed of practically all former Commerce players, who got their early training under Sherlock

The Pere Marquette team is coached by Leo Daley, who also directs the games for Hyde Park High School Th Pere Marquette team has played eight games this year and won all. They are confident that they will be returned the victors over their rivals and they have made plans to parade from the field to the council chamber with the St. Aloysius's band, which will play during the game

Wanderers to Play Legion Champs in Title Game

One of the premier attractions for Thanksgiving Day in semi-pro football circles will be the Cambridge Legion Neponset Wanderers game, scheduled at 2 p.m. at Russell Field, North Cambridge.

The Canibas are claimants of the semi-pro championship, by virtue of having recently defeated the Fittons, of East Boston, and the fact that they have defeated this year every team that has ever registered a win against them. The Legion has tasted defeat but twice in three years, and this season have turned the tables and defeated both of their former conquerors

The Neponset Wanderers present a strong lineup which is liable to make trouble for any opponent. With a successful season behind them they are determined to give the sadden boys a hard, cose battle

The Legion athletic committee has arranged to have the Second Battalion Band at the game to furnish music between the periods, and no effort is being spared to make the game the only football event of the season in the University city.

All-America Eleven Selections Due on Monday

"All-America Monday" is due in just five days.

That's the day when the editors of the Boston American carry the All-America football eleven selected by your favorite football authority, Charles E. Parker.

Since the middle of the season when the college grid stars really began to shine Parker has been keeping careful record of their accomplishments as revealed in the accounts of their games and in the reports of his many expert scouts.

That's why Parker's All-America teams are the best.

That's why you should not miss their publication in next Monday's editions of the Boston American.

Game at Fitchburg

Fitchburg High School football team will play the Leominster High School at Crocker Field, Fitchburg Thanksgiving morning

EAGLE ELEVEN GOES AWAY FOR HOLIDAY

Thanksgiving Day will not be celebrated by the Boston football squad at home in the traditional fashion as the Eagle will leave its aerie on the Heights tonight for some neighboring country club, or other, and not return until the morning of the game

Boston is in much better shape for the game this year than it was last, and the players, in spite of the confidence of the Holy Cross followers, believe that they can hold the Purple and that victory is a reasonable probability

Last Fall, the Georgetown game battered up the Eagle so that Boston was about ready to break on the day of the Holy Cross battle. Boston's season is a long one, and Saturday will be only three days lacking to complete three months of the hardest kind of training. It is no wonder that the Eagle has usually shot its bolt when the annual Purple game rolls around

There is no sign of a break in the Boston squad this Fall, however Every man is fired with the determination to make Saturday's game the finest exhibition of football seen this season. With all the regulars ready to start, and every sub anxious to be at his best form for the last chance to make the coveted letter, Boston is stronger than at any time this season

Tickets for the game are going fast and at the end of a far day will bring a capacity crowd to Braves Field Over fifteen thousand tickets have already been sold on application Wednesday as usual, will send a large delegation to Boston to cheer the Purple team.

Both Holy Cross and Boston will hold smokers on the eve of the game Hotel Lenox will be the headquarters for the Holy Cross followers, while 2,000 men will flock to the Boston City Club. Owen Gallagher, '22 chairman of the smoker, has completed arrangements for Boston's get before which promises to be the biggest and most successful ever

Sport Department Christmas Fund

Here's hoping the spirit of Thanksgiving will hit the hearts of the sport fans and cause Uncle Sam to mail the Sporting Editor with a fat sack of checks Friday morning. The many appeals for Christmas help are coming in, things are tougher in the valley of misfortune than they ever have been

It will take a monster collection to relieve all the suffering. So get aboard the band wagon and help things along.

The fight at the Arena Monday night was the fund's biggest boom to date. The big-hearted throng dropped almost $500 into the pot as passed about. That's as big a sum as ever was collected at a bout, a remarkable bunch of money when you consider the trouble collectors have getting around and about in the crowd.

In $452.28 taken up, there were 5003 pieces of money, 16 bills, 50 half dollars 560 quarters, 1450 dimes, 2160 nickels and 1928 pennies. We sure owe the contributors enjoyed the fight, as they deserved

Send your bit in to the Sporting Editor of the Boston American. The list to date is as follows:

ENGLISH MEETS LATIN ON BRAVES FIELD

By FRED C. LANE

English High and Boston Latin will furnish excitement for Boston fans when they meet at Braves Field tomorrow morning at 9:15 for their annual grid battle The elevens are evenly matched. Neither team has lost a game this season. The game stands out above others in city high school circles.

The championship of the Boston High School League is the prize The South End school carried off this palm last year and two years ago and is out to break the record

English High is a medium weight team, but the fastest eleven for its weight in New England. Three lads stand out, Graham Blair Martin, the halfback, Mike Durant, a tackle, and Bridges, a fullback, have paved the way for English High to attain honors

With the championship of the Suburban league within reach, Malden will meet Medford on the new Malden Athletic Field tomorrow.

Not a grandstand seat can be had for this game, for every available ticket was sold weeks ago.

Malden last year broke the ice by winning over Medford for the first time in years. Tomorrow Malden enters the contest a favorite. In order to hold a place in the limelight, they must win. A tie game will injure their chances of winning the championship.

Medford is striving hard to hold its place in the first division, but is hard pressed by Newton. Medford has no chance to annex the championship.

Fifth Infirment.

THE rush to America now began in earnest, in spite of the Immigration Law and the literacy test. Ponce de Leon set out to seek the Fountain of Youth. De Soto discovered the Mississippi River and never got over it. Magellan found the Straits, but the fellow who discovered the finish beat him all hollow, as he ante up gambling with Fate at a port in Africa where he died game.

In England, meanwhile, Sir Walter Raleigh astonished everybody by spreading a cloak out for Queen Elizabeth so her 12 brogans wouldn't get wet. It was later discovered Sir Walter had hired the cloak for a fancy dress ball and didn't care what happened to it, having left no deposit, so long as he won fame as the first cavalier in the world. The Queen rewarded this act by making him Knight of the Bath and the cloak surely needed one after that.

Along about this time Captain John Smith settled with his crowd down in England and came to the United States, where he settled in Virginia at Jamestown. The Indians didn't take to Farmer Smith, so they put his head on the block and an Indian was about to crown him when Pocahontas rushed out of the audience, threw herself up on Captain John and shouted like a movie subtitle: "Touch not a hair on you gray head" although as a matter of record his head of beauties was a brown color.

The Indian chief looked on this scene deeply affected and then said, "Alright, I'll spare him on only one condition—that I am to keep all the moving picture rights!"

A group of Pilgrims thought it was time to have a lot of Americans they never heard of as descendants, so 215 set out one gloomy day. The Pilgrims always picked gloomy days to do things. The most remarkable thing, however, is that almost everybody in America can trace his antecedents to the 215 cabin passengers on the Mayflower, which proves one thing anyhow—that all people do read their histories!

(If Manhattan Island sold for $24, what did the Bronx sell for, and other questions will be definitely unsettled by Howe Hee Yelp, bird—prize!)

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

I HEAR it said on every hand from hoary age and stripling, we've need of uplift in our land, of reading Keats and Kipling. They say our country is too raw, our men too made for dollars; we lack aesthetic points of view, long hair and turndown collars. Some calm that Master Heck's the chap to give us pulse and finish, although the idea he has on tap make hope and joy diminish. He can't be called a cheerful soul, his heroines are weepy and as they wade through grief and dole, plain folks get pretty sleepy. For he's the boy who scatters gloom with hand serene and steady, on themes as cheerful as the tomb his pen is always ready. It's pain we're in an awful way when we neglect such reading as Ibsen, Tolstoi, Ellen Key, to spend our days a-speeding. But out where sunbeams dance and play and winds are softly sighing, my craze for uplift dies away and Masterlinck grows trying. When robin, blue jay, thrush and lark are tunefully declaiming, the outlook do not look so dark as Turgeney is claiming. It's hard to dwell upon decay, despair and all things tragic, when sunlight shines my cares away as by some golden magic. On things alone the uplift line, I fear I'm getting rusty and yet, when Autumn's air's like wine, those uplift books seem musty. Alas, pleh-ten to the core my soul recels at sorrow. I cry "I'll wait to learn some more of Balzac's stuff tomorrow." But for today life's looking bright and fair as white clouds drifting, with cheer I yodel "All is right!" forgetful of upliftting.

FINANCIAL

By C. St. L. M.

I CAN stand a lot of chaffing
by my pals,
Even many "knocks" they lightly call a "pike,"
But the one that gets my goat,
Brings my heart up in my throat,
Is the guy that tries to borrow
When I'm BROKE.

Yet I know another chump who's worse than that;
To my rising ire he gives the final push.
'Tis the one who's living low
Till he knows I have the "dough"—
He's the guy that comes to borrow when I'm FLUSH.

Medbury Says Webster's Dictionary Unsuitable as a Movie

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

AN Eastern college professor says that the dictionary is the best book that a person can read. Maybe he's correct, but it's not half as interesting as "The Shiek."

MOST people like a love story and the dictionary has no plot to it.

THE average author credits his reader with a little intelligence, but Mr. Webster explains himself as he goes along.

HE may have written a good book, but he'll never make any money out of the moving picture rights to it.

HE has about as much chance of getting his dictionary on the screen as Ernie Young has of dramatizing the telephone book.

EVERYBODY can understand Horatio Alger's literature, but Webster uses a lot of big words that nobody ever heard of.

HE could have relieved the monotony a little by mixing them up a bit, but no, he has to put them in alphabetical order.

SOME writers get a dollar a word for their stories. Webster has a lot of them in his book which are worth five or ten bucks.

WHILE every home has a dictionary, you never see any romantic dame sitting up all night reading it.

THE only time she ever looks at the book is after she'd had a conversation over the phone with some guy from Boston.

HE uses a lot of big words and she hunts them up to find out whether he's educated or calling her names.

ONE dame thought her sweetheart was smarter than Webster because he used several words that weren't in Mr. Webster's novel.

SHE finally found them, but you couldn't convince her that the author of the dictionary hadn't put them in the wrong place.

SHE thinks he's dumb just because he can only spell them one way when she spells them four or five.

NOAH WEBSTER spent half of his life writing the dictionary and the other half trying to sell it.

YOU never find any profane words in this guy Webster's magazine because people never swore in his time. They didn't have prohibition then.

HIS own dictionary was the only thing that was dry in those days.

COLLEGE professors urge us to read the dictionary and learn the English language, but it's no use. Just as soon as a man learns how to speak he goes and gets married.

She was paying her first visit to a cousin who lived in the country. He met her at the station, and after half an hour's drive to d her that they were approaching his farm.

In one of the fields that met the girl's attentive eye stood a windmill, and gathered around it were several pigs.

"Well, I'm surprised!" exclaimed the fair one. "I didn't know that farmers were so considerate."

"What do you mean?" queried the country cousin.

"That over yonder," replied the girl, pointing a pretty finger. "Just think of having a fan out in the field to keep those pigs cool!"

THE HARMFULNESS OF FOOLISH THINKING.

Maybe foolish thinking has been the main reason why you have not met with greater success.

What is your line of thought while you rest in a physical way?

Is it worth anything to you or is it merely day dreams in which you indulge, or is it of something which may mean "easy money" to you?

It is poor policy to let your thoughts dwell on the idea that good fortune is coming to you, and mentally indulge in flights along some line of pleasant thought, but which is not sound conservative thinking.

Conservative and constructive thoughts are desirable.

But you are too lazy, mentally, to use your head to advantage.

It is too hard for you to concentrate.

You have made a practice of foolish thinking so long that you cannot do much besides building air castles and wondering what the one or that one of your pecuniary circumstances would say or do if they saw you now.

Silly fools continue to think as a child after mature age, but intelligent men and women, of worthwhile ambitions, cast off childish things and try to mount the ladder of success without wasting time.

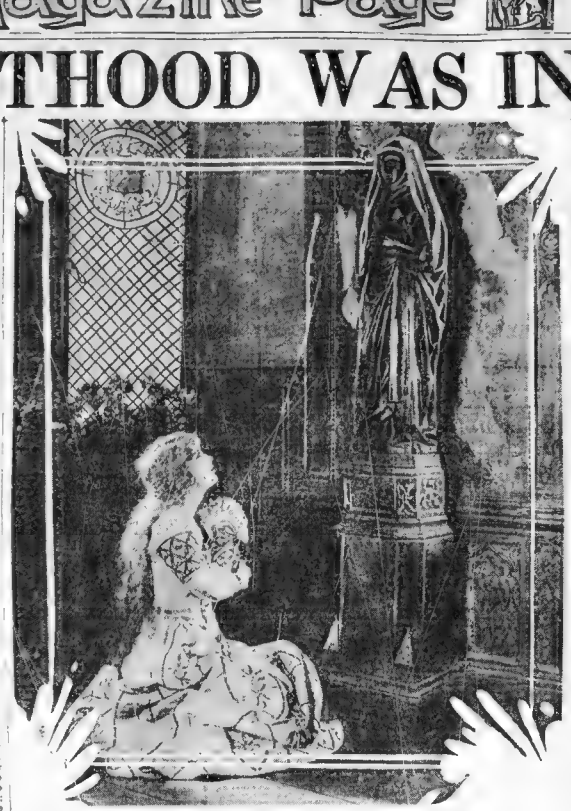
World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

By Charles Major



Mary prays for Brandon during lonely moments in Paris

ALL this the king had communicated to Mary by the lips of Wolsey the evening before and Mary had received it with a silent scorn that would have withered any one but the wooing Duke of York. As I said, when Mary approached her brother to avoid her the trouble of deciding as to how to begin by speaking first herself and his words served as a part with his nature—blunt, cruel and vulgar. He called her a cat and in her all the vile names in his coarse vocabulary of billingsgate. The queen was present and aded and abetted with a word now and then, until Henry, with both help, at last succeeded in working himself into a towering passion, and wound up by vowing Mary a vile wanton in plainer terms than I like to write. This aroused all the antagonism in the girl, and there was plenty of it. She feared Henry no more than she feared me. Her eyes flashed a fire that made even the king draw back as he exclaimed:

"You give me that name and I expect me to remember you are my brother? There are words that make a mother hate her first born and that is one. Tell me what I have done to deserve it?" I expected to hear of ingratitude and disobedience and all that, but supposed you had at least some traces of brotherly feeling—for the ties of blood are hard to break—even if you have of late lost all semblance to man or king."

This was hitting Henry hard, for it was beginning to be the talk in every mouth that he was bowling all the affairs of state to Wolsey and spending his time in puerile amusement. "The toward hope which at all moments appeared in the younge Kynge" was beginning to look, after all, like nothing more than the old time royal cold fire, made to consume but not to warm the nation.

Henry looked at Mary with the stare of a baited bull.

"If running off in male attire, and stopping at inns and boarding-houses with a common captain of the guard doesn't justify my accusation and stamp you what you are, I do not know what would"

Even Henry saw her innocence in her genuine surprise. She was at bay for a little time and I, standing close to her, could plainly see that the place of the cat's claw had never before presented itself.

She hung her head for a moment in silence. It may be true, as you say, but What I have done will not undo the fact that I had to get out of that hole. I had a right to get out if I could, and I was not going to ask your permission and I am sure you do not believe that God can ask Master Brandon"—here the king gave a great laugh, and of course the courtiers joined in

"It is all very well for you to laugh, but Master Brandon would not treat you as he has your sister. Gods! I could have fallen on my knees to a fault like that—What I tell you is true. I trusted him so completely that the fear of dishonor at his hands never suggested itself to me. I knew he would care for and respect me I trusted him, and I was not, he loved me with all the devotion of a knight who loves his lady, and I—I—but what was the use? He knew all of these things and he was a knight who knew what the word meant, and—something broke and the courtiers

With downcast eyes she continued: "I suppose, after all, you are partly right in regard to me for it was his honor that saved me not my own; and if I am not what as I called me I have Master Brandon to thank—not myself"

"We will thank him publicly on Tower Hill, day after tomorrow, at noon" said the king, with his accustomed delicacy, breaking the news of Brandon's sentence as gently as possible

With a low, cry of despair her eyes Mary sank to the floor

Tower Hill—

"You are mad to talk so"

"I think we will," responded Henry; "it usually has that effect, to separate the head from the body and quarter the remains is considered to be four gates. We will take you up to London in a day or two and let you see how beautiful head on the bridge is"

"Behead—quarter—bridge! Lord Jesus!" She could not grasp the thought; she tried to speak, but the words would not come. In a moment she became more coherent, and the words rolled from her lips as a mighty flood tide pours back through the arches of London Bridge.

"You shall not kill him; he is blameless you do not know. Drive these gawking fools out of the room, and I will tell you all." The king ordered the room cleared of everybody but Wolsey, Jane and myself, who remained at Mary's request. When all were gone, the princess continued: "Brother, this man is in no way to blame; it is all my fault—my fault that he loves me, my fault that he tried to run away to New Spain with me. It may be that I have done wrong and that my conduct has been unmaidenly, but I could not help it. Even the first time I ever saw him in the lists with you Viscount Dare was a knaving Knave in my heart begged my pardon I supposed, of course, that day he would contrive some way to be presented to me. . . ."

"You did"

"Yes, but he made no effort at all, and when we met he treated me as if I were an ordinary girl."

"He did?"

"Yes."

"Horrible."

Mary was too intent on her story to heed the sarcasm, and continued "That made me all the more interested in him since it showed that he was different from the wretches who beset you and me with their flattery, and I soon began to seek him on every occasion. This is an unmaidenly confession I am giving, I know, but it is the truth, and must be told. I was satisfied at first if I could only be in the same room with him, and see his face, and hear his voice. The very air he breathed was like an elixir for me. I made every excuse to have him near me I asked him to my parlor—you know about that—and did all I could to be with him. At first he was gentle and kind, but soon I think, he saw the dawning danger in both our hearts, as I too saw it, and he avoided me in every way he could, knowing the trouble it held for us both. Oh! he was wiser and to think to what I have brought him. Brother, let me die for him—I who alone am to blame; take my life and spare him—spare him! He was the wisest, but I doubt if all the wisdom in the world could have saved us. He almost smiled me once in the park—told me to leave him—when it hurt him more than me, I am sure; but he did it to keep matters from growing worse between us. I tried to remember the affront, but could not, and had he struck me I believe I should have gone back to him sooner or later. Oh! it was all my fault; I would not let him save himself So strong was my feeling that I could bear his silence no longer, and one day I went to him in your bed-chamber ante-room and fairly thrust myself and my love upon him. Then, after he was liberated from Newgate, I could not induce him to come to me, so I went to him and begged for his love. Then I coaxed him into taking me to New Spain, and would listen to no excuse and hear no reason. Now here comes another man who would have taken so much coaxing"

"So by heaven! your majesty," said Wolsey, who really had a kindly feeling for Brandon and would gladly save his life, if, by so doing, he would not interfere with any of his own plans and interests Wolsey's heart was naturally kind when it cost him nothing, and much has been related of him, which, to say the least, tells a great deal more than the truth. Ingratitude always recoils upon the ingrate, and Henry's loss was greater than Wolsey's when Wolsey fell

Henry really liked, or, rather, admired, Brandon, as had often been shown, but his nature was incapable of real affection. The highest point he ever reached was admiration, often quite extravagant for him, but usually short-lived, as naked admiration is apt to be. If he had affection for any one it was for Mary. He could not but see the justice of his sister's position, but he had no intention of allowing justice, in the sense of right, to interfere with justice in the sense of the king's will.

"You have been playing the devil at a great rate," he said. "You have disobeyed your brother and your king; have disgraced yourself, have probably made trouble between us and France for if Louis refuses to take you now I will wring you down his throat; and by your own story have led a good man to the block. Quite a budget of evils for one woman to open. But I have noticed that the trouble a woman can make is in proportion to her beauty, and so wonder my little sister has made so much disturbance. It is strange, though, that he should so affect you, Master Wolsey, surely there has been witchery here. He must have used it abundantly to cast such a spell over my sister" Then turning to the prince-cardinal: "Was it at any time possible for him to have given you a love powder; or did he ever make any signs or passes over you?"

"Oh, no! nothing of that sort I never ate or drank anything which he could possibly have tasted. And as to signs and passes, I know he never made any Sir Edwin, you were always present when I was with him until after we left for Bristol; did you ever see anything of the sort?"

I answered "No," and see went on. "Besides, I do not believe much in signs and passes. No one can effect others unless he can induce them to eat or drink some thing in which he has placed a love powder or potion. Then again, Master Brandon did not want me to love him, and surely would not have used such a method to gain what he could have had freely without it."

I noticed that Henry's mind had wandered from what Mary was saying, and that his eyes were fixed upon me with a thoughtful, half serious, inquiring stare that I did not like. I wondered what was coming next, but my curiosity was more than satisfied when the king asked: "So Caskoden was present at all your interviews?"

Ah! Holy Mother! I knew what was coming now, and actually began to shrivel with fright. The king continued: "I suppose he helped you to escape?"

I thought my day had come, but Mary's wit was equal to the occasion. With an expression on her face of the most cherubic innocence she quickly said:

"Oh, no! neither he nor Jane knew anything of it. They were afraid they might divulge it"

Shade of Semiramis!

A lie is a pretty good thing, too now and then, and the man who says that word of Mary's was not a blessed lie must fight me with him. Lies are made to ward off a dagger till one or the other of us bites the dust, and which be he great or small

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

"ALONE IS NO WHAT I WANT" is SISTER ROSA

"WHY, no—" I said thoughtfully "Except that I'm in the midst of a lot of work I hate to drop. Can't you come here?"

"I can not" replied Rosa sharply. "If I can come to your office, I do not ask you shall come to Jaime's. So will you please do what it is I say? There is reason. There is someone I would have you meet. Someone who is coming from my own country."

"Bring him here, by all means!" I cried. "Why not? We'll be quite alone, for Miss May is out to lunch."

"Alone is not what I want," insisted Rosa. "I have someone for you to meet. But what I wish most of all is that you shall see how the Storrs woman takes the meeting with this paisano of mine —this man from my own land. He knows—how you say—her record, you see. In a half hour we look for you."

The receiver clicked up into place. I began to wonder if Miss May would be a full hour at lunch I found that agreed with my will. Rosa Cordova had made an impression on my imagination But however she strives for her effects she shan't attain to it I won't let her destroy my faith in Mabel Storrs!

Miss May came in from lunch in a very short time after Rosa Cordova telephoned her summons for me to meet her at Jimi's office. I started for my hat and coat at once, deeming only long enough to reproach my little partner for not allowing herself enough time at noon.

"Ten minutes for a sandwich and a chocolate milk-shake and twenty for a walk is enough for me," she said with the bright-faced earnestness that is so like a tonic "The reason I took so long every day last week was because I wanted an entirely a matter of me and my new dress."

"Oh, by the way," I said, with a long, free exhalation, "I shouldn't be back by five, please shut up shop promptly and go home ahead of me. The boys will call for me at seven-thirty if they stick to yesterday's plans, and we'll all come for you at about eight o'clock sight. We're having a fashionably late dinner, aren't we?"

"It's glorious," exclaimed Miss May "I've never in my life sat down to dinner any later than seven. I feel like a queen."

"Home for yours at five, queenie," I cried. "And now au revoir."

Then I hurried downstairs hailed a taxi and had myself whisked over to Jimi's office. When I entered the inner sanctum I found Rosa Cordova already established there, and in Jimi's chair at that. Even before she had a chance to introduce me to the arresting looking young man with her, it flashed through my mind that she'd probably made sure that Mabel Storrs was already out to lunch before choosing this rendezvous. I felt that if I knew Rosa—and I thought, moreover, that I did know Rosa—she wanted to be established in a way calculated to give her every possible advantage over Mabel. And Jimi's chair in Rosa's idea of a vantage point—possession of the "head of the table" has been a mooted question between her and Mabel from the first.

"Hello, Anne!" Rosa called, a twinkle in her eye at her own extravagance, "I present to you, Mrs. Hardwick, my so good friend and paisano, Manuelo Ortiz Y Zubiran."

Whilst was stumbling about in my own mind trying to decide how to address the flashing eyed, red lipped, olive skinned cutpiece before me, Rosa went on with an elaborate air which seemed to appeal to the man as genuinely distinguished:

"Senor Ortiz, Mrs. Harrison. This is my good friend 'Nelle,' my little White Lady."

"Senor Ortiz" I murmured, "I am glad to welcome you to my country. I hope you will feel that it is yours also."

I felt as stilted as a Jane Austen novel. But Senor Ortiz almost compelled such mode of address. He was the most friendly quaint looking man I'd ever seen. His blue black hair was long and thick and waved boldly back from a low, broad, low forehead His eyebrows were thick and dark and square at the outer edges instead of curving

Daddy had been an actor.

His was now, of course, an actor on the world's great stage, but years and years before he had met Bobby's mother he had been a real actor—a real actor, if not a successful one

Therefore, he felt acutely the answer he gave when one day his little boy said to him:

"Daddy, what's an actor?"

"An actor, my boy," he replied tonsely and slowly, "is a person who can walk to the side of a stage, peer into the wings at a group of actors waiting for their cues and a number of bored hands and other theatrical odds and ends, and exclaim: 'Ah, what a lovely view there is from this window!'"

Under its healing, soothing influence, chest pains soon relieve, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whoopingcough, bronchial asthma.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake well. Instead, you may prefer one clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly in any climate.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt results in coughs from the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

How Billiards Began

BILLIARDS had its origin in an outdoor game called "pallemaille," an old French pastime, like croquet. When the billiard table was invented is not known, but it is mentioned in a manuscript dated 1591.

KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese Treat Their Women—

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandan, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by

LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, interviews

COUNT SAITO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Muratas, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMIMURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan. A part of the revelation is the Chonkina, or Geisha dance, seen by Barrington, who is shocked by the performance. He is disturbed to learn from the talk of Americans and Englishmen that marriages with Japanese women are not favorably regarded.

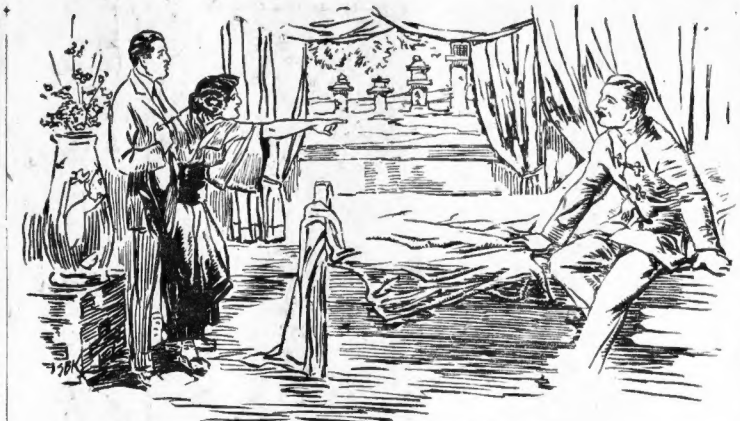
TANAKA, a nondescript Japanese, attaches himself to Barrington and accompanies him to Tokyo, where Geoffrey meets

REGGIE FORSYTH, attache to the British embassy, musical and romantic, who has just been transferred from Paris.

YAE SMITH, daughter of a Japanese mother and an English father, languishes around Reggie's apartment, where Barrington meets her.

SAITO, lawyer for the Fujinami estate, arranges for the Barringtons to meet the bride's family. Barrington is not impressed. A family conference discloses that the Fujinami income is derived from the Geisha house privileges in Tokyo and elsewhere. It is decided that Asako should be divorced and married to a Japanese.

ASAKO, Barrington's bride, begins to learn something of Japanese family relations and hear about her father and mother, the one a poet and the other a delicate, clinging little woman, who died when Asako was born.



"Liar!" she cried. "Reggie, do you believe him?"

OUT of sheer devilry, Miss Smith waited for the arrival of Lady Cynthia. The great lady paid no more attention to her existence than if she had been a piece of the house. But she greeted Geoffrey most cordially.

"Come for a walk," she said in her abrupt way.

As they turned down the village street she announced:

"The worst has happened—I suppose you know?"

"About Reggie?"

"Yes; he's actually engaged to be married to the creature. Has he told you?"

"In the greatest confidence."

"Well, he forgot to mention the young lady to secrecy. She has told everybody."

"Can't he be recalled to London?"

"The old man says that would just push him over the edge. He has talked of resigning from the service."

"Is there anything to be done?"

"Nothing! Let him marry her. It will spoil his career in diplomacy, of course. But he will soon get tired of her selling him. He will divorce her, and will give up his life to music to which, of course, he belongs. People like Reggie Forsyth have no right to marry at all."

"But are you sure that she wants to marry him?" said his friend; and he related his conversation with Yae that morning.

Very Interesting

"That's very interesting and encouraging," said Her Excellency. "So she has been trying her hand on you already."

"I never thought of that," exclaimed Geoffrey. "I knew that Reggie is my best friend; and that I am married."

The judicial features of Lady Cynthia tightened with a judicial smile.

"You have been through so many London seasons, Captain Barrington, and there is still no guile in you!"

They walked on in silence past the temple terraces down a winding country lane.

"Captain Barrington, would you care to play the part of a real hero, a real theatre hero, playing to the gallery?"

Geoffrey was baffled. Had the talk suddenly swung over to amateur theatricals? Lady Cynthia was a terrible puller of legs.

"Did you ever hear of Madge Carlyle?" she asked, "or was she before your time?"

"I have heard of her."

She was a famous London cocotte in the days when mashers wore whiskers and all "Champagne Charlie" was sung.

"At the age of forty-three" said Lady Cynthia, "Madge decided to marry for the third or fourth time. She had found a charming young man with plenty of money and a noble heart, who believed that Madge was a much slandered woman. His friends were sorry for the young man; and one of them decided to give a dinner to celebrate the betrothal. In the middle of the feast an urgent message arrived for the enamoured one, summoning him to his home. When he had gone the other started pitying poor Madge with drinks. She was very fond of drinks. They had splendid fun. Then one of the guests—he was an old lover of Madge's—suggested—Good-bye to the old days and the rest of it!"

"But what did he think of his friends?" asked Geoffrey. "It seems a low-down sort of trick."

"He was very much alive to it at the time," said Lady Cynthia; "but afterwards he understood that they were heroes, real theatre heroes."

"It looks like rain," said Geoffrey, uneasily.

"Come for a walk," she said in her abrupt way.

As they turned down the village street she announced:

"The worst has happened—I suppose you know?"

"About Reggie?"

"Yes; he's actually engaged to be married to the creature. Has he told you?"

"In the greatest confidence."

"Well, he forgot to bind his young lady to secrecy. She has told everybody."

"Can't he be recalled to London?"

"The old man says that would just push him over the edge. He has talked of resigning from the service."

"Is there anything to be done?"

"Nothing! Let him marry her. It will spoil his career in diplomacy, of course. But he will soon get tired of her selling him. He will divorce her, and will give up his life to music to which, of course, he belongs. People like Reggie Forsyth have no right to marry at all."

"But what did he think of his friends?" asked Geoffrey. "It

of course, had to work at the Embassy; he could not come.

It was an ideal excursion. They reached Senju, the woodcutter's village at the end of the lake. They ascended the forest path as far as the upper lake, a mere pond of reeds and sedges, which the bears are supposed to haunt.

Geoffrey and Yae, however, saw nothing more alarming than the village curs.

"Returned in safety from the land of danger!" cried the girl as she sprang ashore at the steps of the villa.

The air and exercise had wearied Geoffrey. After lunch he changed into a kimono of Reggie's. Then he lay down on his bed and was soon fast asleep.

How long he slept he could not say; but he awoke slowly out of confusing dreams. Somebody was in his room. Somebody was near his bed. Was it Asako? Was it a dream?

No, it was his comrade of the morning's voyage. It was Yae Smith. She was sitting on the bed beside him. She was gazing into his face with her soft, still, cat-like eyes. What was she doing that for? She was stroking his arm. Her touch was soft. He did not stop her.

Her hair was let down to below her waist, long, black hair, more silky in texture and more wavy than that of the Japanese woman. Her kimono was wide open at the throat. A sweet fragrance exhaled from her body.

"Big captain, may I?" she pleaded.

"What?" said Geoffrey, still half asleep.

"Just lie by your side—just once—just for the last time," she cooed.

Well Pleased

Geoffrey was for going to sleep again, well pleased with his dream. But Yae slipped an arm across his chest and caught his shoulder in her hand. She nestled closer to him.

"Geoffrey," she murmured, "I love you so much. You are so strong, and so big, Geoffrey. I want to stay like this always, always, holding on to you till I make you love me. Love me just a little, Geoffrey. Nobody will ever know, Geoffrey, you must be nice to have me near you. Geoffrey, you must, you must want to love me."

She was hugging his body now in an embrace astonishingly powerful for so small a creature. It was this pressure which finally awoke Geoffrey. Gently he disengaged her arms and sat up in the bed.

She was clinging to his neck now, wild-eyed like a Masnad. He felt pitifully ridiculous. The role of Joseph is so thankless and humiliating. A month ago he would have ordered her sternly to get out of the room and behave herself. But the hot month in Tokyo had relaxed his firmness of mind, and familiarity with Reggie's bohemian morality has sapped his fortress of Good Form.

"Don't be so naughty, Yae," he said feebly. "Reggie may be coming. For God's sake control yourself."

Her voice was terrible now.

Geoffrey had lost the first moment when he might have been stern with her. Clumsily he essayed to loosen her embrace. But for the first time in his life he was in the grip of an elemental natural force, a thing foreign to his experience of women in marriage or out of it.

"Yae, don't," he gasped, pushing the girl away. "I can't; I'm married."

"Married!" she screamed. "Does marriage hurt like this? Love me, love me, Geoffrey. You must love me, you will!"

"The rhapsody is ended."

A voice which nobody would have recognized as Reggie's put a sudden end to this frantic assault.

Smiling Queerly

He was standing in the doorway smiling queerly. He had watched the two from the garden, whence, indeed all Chupenji could have seen them in the open bedroom. He had slipped off his shoes and had stolen up quietly in order to listen to them. Now he judged it time to intervene.

Yae started up from the bed. For a moment she hovered on the edge, uncertain of her tactics. Geoffrey stared, one hand to his forehead. When the girl darted across the room, fell at Reggie's feet, clasped his knees, and sobbed convulsively:

"Reggie, Reggie, forgive me!" she cried. "It's not my fault. He's been asking me and asking me to do this—ever since Kamphura—and all the time here. This is what he came to stay here for. Reggie, forgive me. I will never be naughty again."

Reggie looked across at his friend for confirmation or denial. The queer smile had vanished. Good Form decreed that the man must lie for the woman's sake, if necessary till his soul were damned. But, with Geoffrey, Good Form had long since been thrown to the winds, like International Law in war time. Besides, the woman was no better than a cocotte; and Reggie's friendship was at stake.

"No," he said huskily: "that is not true. I was quietly sleeping here and she came up to me. She is man mad."

The tangled heap at Reggie's feet leaped up, her green eyes blazing.

"Liar," she cried. "Reggie, do you believe him? The hypocrite, the goody-goody, the white slave man, the pimp!"

"What does she mean?" said Geoffrey. Then, God, the woman was clearly mad.

"Fujinami! Fujinami!" she yelled. "The great girl king! The Yoshiwara dainyoji like scrap of money—rich his fool wife spends on sham curios was made in the Yoshiwara, made by women, made out of filth, made by prostitutes!"

The last word brought Geoffrey to his feet. In his real agony he had quite forgotten his sham sin.

"Reggie, for God's sake, tell me, is this true?"

"Yes," said Reggie quietly. "It is quite true."

"Then why did no one tell me?"

"Husbands," said the young man, "and prospective husbands are always the last to learn. Yae, go back to the hotel. You have done enough harm for today."

"Not unless you forgive me, Reggie," the girl pleaded. "I will never go unless you forgive."

"I can't forgive," he said, "but I can probably forget."

The wrath of these two men fascinated her. She would have waited if she could, listening at the door. Reggie knew this.

"If you don't clear out, Yae, I will have to call To to take you," he threatened.

To his great relief she went quietly.

Reggie returned to the bare bedroom, where Geoffrey with bowed head was staring at the floor. In Reggie's short kimono the big man looked decidedly ridiculous.

"Good," thought Reggie. "Thank God for the comic spirit. It will be easier to get through with this now."

His first action was to wash his hands. He had an unconscious instinct for symbolism. Then he sat down opposite his friend.

The action of sitting reduces tragedy to comedy at once—this was one of Napoleon's maxims.

Then he opened his cigarette case and offered it to Geoffrey. This, too, was symbolic. Geoffrey took a cigarette mechanically, and sucked it between his lips, unlighted.

"Geoffrey," said his friend very quietly, "let us try to put these women and all their rottenness out of our heads. We will try to talk this over decently."

Geoffrey was so stunned by the shock of what he had just learned that he had thought of nothing else. Now, all of a sudden he remembered that he owed serious explanations to his friend.

Awfully Sorry

"Reggie," he said dully, "I'm most awfully sorry. I had never dreamed of this. I was good pals with Yae because of you. I never dreamed of making love to her. You know how I love my wife. She must have been mad to think of me like that. Besides," he added sheepishly, "nothing actually happened."

"I'm sure I don't care what actually happened or did not happen. Damn actual facts. They distort the truth. They are at the bottom of every injustice. What actually happened never matters. It is the picture which sticks in one's brain. True or false, it sticks just the same; and suddenly or slowly it alters everything. But I can wipe my own nose, I think. It is much more serious with you than with me, Geoffrey. She has bruised my heel, but she has broken your head. No, don't protest, for Heaven's sake! I am not interested."

"Then what she says is absolutely true?" said Geoffrey, lighting his cigarette at last, and throwing the match aside as if it were Horse.

"For a whole year I have been living on prostitutes' earnings. I am no better than these awful panses in Leicester Square, who can be flogged if they are caught, and serve them right, too. And all that filthy Yoshiwara, it belongs to Asako, to my sweet, innocent little girl, just as Brandan belongs to my father; and with all the filthy money we have been buying comforts and clothes and curios and rubbish."

Reggie was pouring out whiskies and sodas, two strong ones. Geoffrey gulped down his drink, and then proceeded with his lamentation:

"I understand it all now. Everybody knew. The secrecy and the mystery. Even at my wedding they were saying, 'Don't go to Japan, don't go.' They must have all known even then. And then those damned Fujinami, so anxious to be civil for the beastly money's sake, and yet hiding everything and lying all the time. And you knew, and the Ambassador, and Count Saito, and the servants, low-always whispering and laughing behind our backs. But you, Reggie, you were my friend, you ought to have told me."

A Wise Man

"I asked Sir Ralph," said Reggie candidly, "whether you ought to be told. He is a very wise man. He said, 'No.' He said, 'It would be cruel, and it would be useless. They will go back to England soon and then they will never know.' Where ignorance is bliss, you understand."

"It was unfair," groaned Geoffrey; "you were all deceiving me."

"I said to Sir Ralph that it seemed to me unfair and dangerous. But he has more experience than I."

"But what am I to do now?" said the big man helplessly. "This money must be given up, yes, and everything we have. But whom to? Not to those filthy Fujinami?"

"No," advised Reggie. "Go back to England first. Get your brain clear. Talk it over with your lawyers. Don't be too generous. Magnanimity has spoiled many noble lives. And remember that your wife is in this too. You must consider her feelings. She is young and she knows nothing. I don't think that she wants to be poor, and she will understand your motives."

"I will make her understand then," said Geoffrey.

"Don't talk like a brute. You will have to be very patient and considerate for her. Go slow."

"Can I stop here tonight, then?" asked Barrington, plaintively.

"No," said Reggie with firmness; "that is really more than I could stick. I told you—truth or untruth, the mind keeps on seeing pictures. Pack up your things. Call a coolie. The evening walk down to Nikko will do you more good than my jawing. Good-bye."

An unreal handshake—and he was gone.

Deeply Wronged

Then, of a sudden, Geoffrey realized that, how very unwittingly, he had deeply wronged this man who was his best friend and upon whom he was leaning in his hour of trial. Like Job, his adversities were coming upon him from this side and from that, until he must curse God and die. Now his friend had given him his dismissal. He would probably never see Reggie Forsyth again.

As he was starting on his long walk downhill a motor car passed him. Only one motor car that season had climbed the precipitous road from the plains. It must be Yae Smith's. Just as it was passing the girl leaned out of the carriage and blew a kiss to Geoffrey.

She was not alone. There was a small fat man in the car beside her, a Japanese with a round, impertinent face. With a throb of bitter heartlessness Geoffrey recognized his own servant, Tanaka.

Next morning Reggie Forsyth crossed the lake as usual to his work at the embassy. He met the Ambassadress on the terrace of her villa.

"Good morning, Lady Cynthia," he said, "I congratulate you on your masterly diplomacy."

"What do you mean?"

Her manner nowadays was very chilly toward her former favorite.

"In accordance with your admirable arrangements," he said, "my marriage is off."

"Oh, Reggie!" her coolness changed at once, "I'm so glad!——"

He held up a warning hand.

"But—you have broken a better man than I."

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Geoffrey Barrington. He has learned that the Fujinami are, and where his money comes from."

"You told him?"

"I'm not such a skunk as all that, Lady Cynthia."

She Pondered

Her Excellency was pondering what had better be done for Geoffrey.

"Where is he?" she asked.

"He stopped the night at Nikko. He is probably in the train for Tokyo by now."

"If she were a hero, a real theatre hero, as Geoffrey had been apparently, she would go straight off to Tokyo also, and perhaps she would be able to prevent a catastrophe. Or perhaps she would not. Perhaps she would only make things worse. On the night she had better stop in Chuzenji and look after her own husband.

"Reggie," she said, "you've had a lucky escape. How did you know that I had a hand in this? You're more of a girl than a man. A rotten marriage would have broken you. Geoffrey Barrington is made of stronger stuff. He is in for a hard time. But he will learn a lot which he will know already; and he will survive."

CHAPTER XX.
The Kimono

Na wo to wa wo
Hito ni mi saru.
Me, wagimi!
Hito no naka-goro
Kikkimono na yume!

It is other people who have separated
You and me.
Come, my lord!
Do not dream of listening
To the between-words of people!

AFTER a ghastly night of sleeplessness at Nikko, Geoffrey Barrington reached Tokyo in time for lunch. His thoughts were confused and discordant.

"I feel as if I had been drunk for a week," he kept on saying to himself. Indeed, he felt a fume of unreality over all his actions.

One thing was certain: financially, he was a ruined man. Tenthousandsa year which yesterday morning had been practically his, the ease and comfort which had seemed so secure, were lost more hopelessly than if his bank had failed. Even the cash in his pocket he touched with the greatest disgust, as if those identical bills and coins had been paid across the brothel counter as the price for a man's dirty pleasures and a girl's shame and disease. He imagined that the Nikko hotelkeeper looked at his notes suspiciously as though they were endorsed with the seal of the Yoshiwara.

Geoffrey was ruined. He was henceforth dependent on what his brain could earn and on what his father would allow him, five hundred pounds a year at the outside. If he had been alone in the world it would not have mattered much; but Asako, poor little Asako, the innocent cause of his disaster, she was ruined, too. She who loved riches, her jewelry, her pretty things, she would have to sell them all. She would have to follow him into poverty, she, who had no experience of its meaning. This was his punishment, perhaps, for having carnally pursued the idea of a rich marriage. But what had Asako done to deserve it? Thank God, his marriage had at least not been a loveless one.

Felt Acutely

Geoffrey felt acutely the need of human sympathy in his trouble. By sheer bad luck he had forfeited Reggie's friendship. But he could still depend upon his wife's love.

So he ran up the stairs at the Imperial Hotel longing for Asako's welcome, though he dreaded the obligation to break the bad news.

His threw open the door. The room was empty. His luked for cloaks and hats and curios, for luggage, for any sign of her presence. There was nothing to indicate that the room was her.

Sick with apprehension, he returned to the corridor. There was a boy at the door at hand.

"Okusan go away," said the boy san. "No come back, I think."

"Where has she gone?" asked Geoffrey.

Big ones are brewing in the East, in the Middle West, on the Pacific coast.

We will see industrial mergers, banking mergers, railroad consolidations, nearly all lines of activity.

Incidentally, the indications from Washington are that anti-trust prosecutions will not be forbidden.

In the meanest-show little time now I expect to see it generally admitted that the new low levels would bring the swallowing up of many small and medium automobile companies by the larger corporations. I gave reasons why this is, to my mind, inevitable, citing among other things, that buyers do not like to entrust their money in receiving proper service when they go traveling in cars made by companies not having service stations dotted all over the country.

This analysis of the automobile outlook has brought a number of protests. Says one manufacturer:

"I see that you have been hobnobbing with some of those big automobile fellows in Detroit. Don't let those fellows beguile you into thinking that they are the only people on the map. That's the way the big 'buggy men' used to talk, except they were years ago, and all sorts of schemes were projected looking to the consolidation of the carriage factories and getting it down to a few hands. Some of the necessary manufactures ceased entirely, and others were changed over enough to what was known as the Standard Wheel Company. This company bought up all the carriage wheel manufacturers, or nearly all of them, and they boosted prices 100 per cent. The result of this was the organization of other wheel factories and the Standard 'busted' all to flinders.

"General Motors and a few others can't corner the automobile business. It is too vast for anything of the kind. There will be a levelling down process."

For my part, I still feel that the automobile industry will witness more mergers than almost any other line of trade.

Oils and Steels Lead in Strong New York Market; Eries Have Sharp Break

BEECHNUT AND FISHER BODY SET HIGHS

Oils led a strong New York market in the forenoon, while steels took leadership in the afternoon. Money opened at 4½, then lifted to 5 per cent. U. S. Steel rose better than a point.

Biggest A. Meyer Tobacco added more than 8 points to its gains. Prices were last in the last hour, Beechnut and Fisher Body at new 1922 tops, and Oils a set sagged to a low.

Erie issues were sharply depressed, off one or more to over 5 at their lowest, by a bear drive.

Stromberg Carburetor added record 5 points on strength of its raise in quarterly dividend from $1 to $1.25.

Torrington and "L" Are Boston Features

Features of trading on the Boston Stock Exchange were Torrington, which gained more than a point on its $1.25 extra cash dividend declaration, and Boston Elevated, up 1¼ from its early low on a single transaction to a new high on the move.

Point or better gains were also made by Calumet & Arizona, Massachusetts Gas (called First, Minsi-Erie Pipe Line, General Electric and Amoskeag.

Calumet & Hecla yielded 5 points of its late gains.

It Is Both Good and Natural to Give Thanks

It is both good and natural to give thanks. The person who accepts benefits without at least the return of gratitude is less than human.

To maintain the grateful attitude is becoming to each of us, since we know how much more the best and most serviceable gets out of life and the world than he can possibly give in turn.

Indeed, even the lowliest, poorest, most miserable is continuously a beneficiary of more joy, riches and varied blessing than by individual effort he has ever earned.

To "praise God from whom all blessings flow" is the simplest expression of this spirit of appreciation. Such prayer of praise brings further benediction to the thankful heart.

A nation is fortunate that has the wise tradition of thanksgiving. Not only does that practice preserve, in each of us individually and together as a nation, the thankful spirit, but it serves to UNITE us in a common attitude whose source is deeper and more significant than the relatively superficial differences which divide us.

Like material beauty, which is its own excuse for being, this spiritual beauty of thanksgiving needs neither to be justified nor explained. Nor do we have to be given REASONS for gratitude, such as the proclamations of Presidents seek to provide.

Just to be alive and to sense what that means, to be an American and to realize what that involves—should be enough to thrill us always and to bring us reverently to our knees (figuratively at least) on the official Thanksgiving Day for the simple, natural words of gratitude:

I THANK YOU.

Honest Ship Subsidy

Great Merchant Marine Necessary to United States in Time of War

It is announced by the Navy Department that the direction of fire by battleships is entirely feasible from aeroplanes. Today the effect of shots must be observed from the masthead of the ships. Tomorrow the aeroplane will hover over the enemy ships and telegraph back by radio where to place the shots.

But most important of all it is known that the battleship itself cannot fend off the destructive attack of an aeroplane squadron. Therefore, the nation which has the largest number of effective aeroplanes effectively manned will control the seas. That nation which can have the largest number of effective aeroplanes will be the nation which in the time of peace has the largest merchant marine. Peace time ships are the ships which will transport the fighting aeroplanes, to keep them in fuel, in ammunition, in repair and give their operators a haven in which to rest.

This is why a great merchant marine is so necessary to the United States. This is why we should have it, even if we had to pay the entire cost of it out of taxation as we pay the entire cost of our navy. An honest ship subsidy will do it and preserve American conditions on board our merchant ships.

A Modest Young Gentleman

He Could Teach Some of Ours

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Mr. Hyams of the Red Cross, who wants nations to love each other, invited Lord Mountbatten of Great Britain and his young wife to meet at luncheon the usual dismal aggregation of "greatest newspaper editors."

Mountbatten, barely twenty-two years old, lieutenant in the British Navy, could teach one thing to many of our homemade young gentlemen, and that thing is MODESTY. Making his short speech, he unbuttoned and buttoned his coat three times, always keeping a firm grip on at least one of the buttons and kicking one foot with the other to stimulate the flow of thought.

The one word that his speech emphasized was "courteous." The British "upper class" understands the value of that word. It's their chief asset.

The young man's wife, just finishing a honeymoon twelve or fifteen thousand miles long, after meeting reporters from New York to the Grand Canyon, and from the Grand Canyon to Hollywood—where she and her husband played in a moving picture with Charlie Chaplin—seemed bewildered, like some nice little white kitten, that had suddenly found itself packed in a cattle car on the way to the stockyards.

The reporters have told you four thousand times that she is the richest girl in England. What is infinitely more important is that she has fine large gray eyes, a good smile, a wide forehead and intelligence back of it. The ruling class in England constantly draws to itself the best that is available. That is why it continues to be "the ruling class."

Price of Turkeys

Edward J. O'Malley, Commissioner for Public Markets for the city of New York, warns the people not to pay extravagant prices for Thanksgiving turkeys. He declares that they should not in any event be over fifty cents a pound. He says that carloads of turkey are now being held on the railroad tracks in order to create an artificial shortage of turkeys so that their price can be run up.

We hope that our people in New England will be on guard also against extortion. It is better not to have turkeys in celebration of our Pilgrim forefathers than to submit to robbery in order to get one. That was not according to the principles or the conduct of the Pilgrims.

Speed the Graft Probe

We hope that the Finance Commission will complete its investigation and make public its findings concerning the guilt of members of the City Council in the purchase of land from the Jewish religious society sufficiently before election to allow the finding and the evidence to be discussed.

Mr. Brickley is a candidate for re-election. He wants to know and everyone wants to know what the whole story is to be. This newspaper particularly wants to know, because if we believe that he is not guilty we want to support him for re-election.

Let the Baby Live!

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

BORN armless, legless, helpless—the newspapers in their terse fashion described a baby born lately in Chicago.

And immediately was raised the academic question—but this time for practical reasons—whether the baby should be allowed to live.

All agreed that the child had as much right to life as any one normally equipped. The more so as she was perfectly well, apart from her handicaps.

Who knows—ventured one of the physicians—but that the girl might develop one of the best minds of her time.

Of course, you never can tell. There is Helen Keller, for instance. Born deaf, dumb and blind—but, then, every one knows the story of that rare spirit, compounded of her own intrinsic beauty and the devoted love of her several teachers and especially of Anne Sullivan Macy.

To come to our "helpless" baby.

Euthanasia—easy death—is an old theory of the human race. Indeed, it used to be the general practice before the race had gone far towards becoming deliberately human.

Among some groups the aged or otherwise helpless or useless would be put to death with cruel calmness. Among others, sickly infants would be exposed and allowed to die.

It all sounds horribly callous, terribly inhuman—even to us who have just allowed the sacrifice of millions of the flower of our youth in the monstrous savagery of war.

One wonders how many, who placidly contemplate the mutual murder of millions when the process is glorified by calling it war, would tolerate even theoretically the practice of euthanasia—the giving of easy and beautiful death to some aged person suffering the tortures of incurable disease.

Or to this armless, legless, helpless baby.

And it is altogether to our credit that we reject euthanasia.

There is no doubt that duly we shall think and feel and work out this obvious inconsistency so that we shall become as deeply concerned for life and its preservation on a large scale as we have learned to be beautifully sympathetic towards the individual.

And then, indeed, war will be no more.

Tobacco Trade

Editor Boston American:

In answer to "Smoker" in a recent issue of the Boston American relative to various prices on the same brand of tobacco, in which he suggests that the smokers organize in order to boycott dealers who supposedly overcharge on items of tobacco—I would very much like to enlighten "Smoker." The retailer who sells his tobacco for 17 or 18 cents a can is obtaining a fair price, which enables him to make the necessary 25 per cent. gross profit to which he is justly entitled in order that he may pay his bills and expenses and live decently. The retailer who charges you 15 cents for a can of tobacco is cutting the price in order to get the trade. He in all probability can afford to sell for this price because he is doing a volume of tobacco business which cuts his overhead expenses materially.

The retailer is a source of convenience without whom the consumer cannot get along; and if the consumer does not and will not support his neighborhood retailers and is compelled to walk a great distance in order to obtain his household supplies he will very soon realize that the retailer is not overcharging him, but is rendering him a service which is worth dollars and cents.

FAIR PLAY.

Good Will Messenger

Editor Boston American:

Boston within the last few days paid tribute to Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger of France." The elite citizenry of our cultured town wined and dined and feted the eminent French statesman. Clemenceau comes to America in the guise of an angel of peace and messenger of good will, but in grim reality he is the devil of war and Mars' boon companion.

France today has a standing army of 800,000 men ready to engage in the gruesome game of war at the behest of the French war lords. America, if it is to remain true to the spirit in which this government was founded, will not take seriously the utterances of a man who would make a most fit associate for that German exile, now a resident of Holland, William Hohnzollern. As an American and a participant in the late war, I believe that our boys who now sleep in Flanders fields did not make the supreme sacrifice so that German junkerism might be supplanted by French imperialism. VICTOR GERTLIN.

Emancipated Girls

By Lucy Lowell

I WONDER what those EMANCIPATED girlies will be like twenty years from now?

Oh, they are EMANCIPATED! I don't suppose that anywhere in all this wide, wonderful world there are any women half so free! Or are they? Well, we'll see!

I've just been reading about April Farm, you see, and about Alice and Dorrie and Harriet, become Harry, and the others.

They have left the world behind, with all its impositions of conventions and customs and rules and laws and things, and they've bid themselves to "Barley" Garland's chicken-coop where they can "be themselves" and invite their souls in khaki knickers and middies and find Utopia and attain that something or other that doesn't seem to be anywhere else.

They have become "mental mates" of the young man whose married mate has moved out to give them room. And they dip into the same bowl of milk of an evening, and the same paper of cigarettes of an afternoon, and they read the works of warped minds and till the soil and labor like a lot of peasants.

All for what? To be sincere! At least that is what they call it.

One of them has left a pretty little home and a husband of two months for the privilege, and goodness knows what's happening to him! Not that she seems to care!

Laws do not make life—they follow its demands. They are repressive, perhaps, not oppressive. And repression has been found useful!

The little bride of two months may continue to be a farm slave for ten years or twenty years. And at the end of that time she may have a pair of roughened hands, stooped shoulders, tired eyes, and her "sincerity of expression," though I fancy she won't bother much with it by that time.

Her friends will have become lost in the windings of years. Her family will have scattered. Other women of her age will have homes and husbands and children while she walks in a wilderness of isolation—old, poor, alone! Does it balance today's EMANCIPATION?

And, far as that's concerned, aren't the shelts and shalt nots that insure EMANCIPATION at April Farm as stringent as any laws anywhere? So where is their freedom, after all?

SEEN AND HEARD

BILL HARTLAND, the Boston agent of the Lloyd-Sabauda Steamship Company, used to be an interpreter in the Immigration Service, and is one of the most accomplished linguists in America. He speaks, reads and writes practically every language spoken on the shores of the Mediterranean and Black seas, including the Balkan dialects and Arabic. He learned the Syrian tongue in this country in order to do some work among the Syrians for the government, and learned it so well in three months that Boston Syrians mistook him for one of themselves.

BILL PETERS, the Ponkapoag farmer and, incidentally, secretary of the Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, is building himself a bungalowe in Milton and expects to retire as a farmer before Spring.

The "improvement of the Mystic River lands," which has been the slogan of Somerville politicians for years, will eventually become a reality. Government officials, together with representatives of Somerville and Medford, have taken a survey of the course, the first real step that action will be taken in straightening out the river bed.

"It was too funny for anything!" remarked a very proper-appearing young woman to her women companion as she left a tobacco store on Bromfield street. "I asked the clerk to show me a cigarette case. 'Man's or woman's?' he asked in the most matter-of-fact fashion and when he noticed my shocked expression he quickly added: 'Beg pardon, madam! No offence intended. Sell as many for ladies as we do for gentlemen these days.'"

ADD PERILS OF A GREAT CITY — Crossing Summer street at Church Green at noon time. The traffic officer on duty there is transferred to the junction of Summer, Washington and Winter streets at noon and Church Green pedestrians, hustling to and from lunch, can take care of themselves.

A marquise diamond ring which was made for Marie Antoinette, and which bears the signet "Marie" engraved on an oblong diamond in the centre, was recently acquired by a Boston wholesale jeweler. Aside from its historical interest, the ring is unusual in that there are only five or six examples of engraved diamonds of the period of the French Queen now in existence. Diamonds may now be engraved with little difficulty, but in those days it was a very delicate and tedious business.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CIVILIZED APES

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Would the anthropoid ape evolve into a civilized creature by bringing him in contact with civilization for an indefinite time? By 'contact,' I mean having the simian live as much as possible as we live."—R. P. J. H., New Rochelle.

IF we knew more about the origin, and the basal nature, of the difference between the human and the anthropoid, or simian, stocks a definite answer to your question might possibly be given.

In any case, if the answer were affirmative, it would be a triumph for the Lamarckian theory that acquired characters are inheritable, that new wants and desires, aroused by change of environment, stimulate the growth of new organs and, consequently, the modification of species, and that "all that has been acquired, laid down or changed in the organization of individuals in the course of their life is conserved by generation and transmitted to the new individuals that proceed from those who have undergone the changes."

If that were all so, the celebrated ape, "John Daniel," who died in New York a year or so ago, should have been capable of giving rise to a race of "civilized apes," more closely resembling the human type, at least in their conduct and ways of life, than any apes or monkeys now in existence. But it would have to be an age-long process, occupying a stretch of time almost infinitely exceeding in length an, that can be covered by human experience.

John Daniel's training did not give him the germs of any characteristics that he was unpossessed of before the training began. He simply developed powers that he had in him, but which would not have expressed themselves in just the way they did if he had grown up in the native habitat and amid the native surroundings of his race. But, if the Lamarckian hypothesis is sound, his experiences of the advantages of human society and supervision should have implanted in him some, however slight, tendency to evolutionary change which he could hand on to his descendants.

But the Lamarckian ideas have been under a cloud since Weismann's theory of heredity came to the front, for, according to that, "there is no inheritance of acquired characters." What the individual gains from his peculiar environment he may fully enjoy for himself, but he cannot hand on his gains to his descendants.

In this view we might picture John Daniel as personally introduced a little way across the threshold of the human paradise, the entry to which he could never have opened for his descendants. However far from civilization he might himself have advanced, if his life had been prolonged indefinitely, his offspring would have had to start just as far back as he did. That is the teaching of pure Weismannism.

On the other hand, the most extreme defender of Lamarck's theory would surely not think of assuming that John Daniel's descendants, in the best of circumstances, could ever closely resemble human beings. It would be an ape civilization that they would develop more or less, it may be, as imitation of the human, but without its roots.

The two races would remain distinct, each depending on its own foregoing line of evolution. There could be no mingling of currents, no combination of branches with complete loss of identity. The civilized ape and man might proceed along roughly parallel lines, but they would not blend into one.

MARRIED LIVE LONGER THAN SINGLE PEOPLE

By F. A. Wray

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Do single people live longer than married?

Two of Britain's most famous doctors—Sir Bernard Hollander, the renowned alienist, and Sir Bruce Porter, head of the Army Medical Service—have just been discussing this question in public, and in both cases their answer is a strong negative.

Both begin by dismissing the subject of many unhappy marriages, which, from their experience, they are inclined to view as an almost negligible percentage.

"I treat the matter from a homely, human point of view," says Dr. Hollander. "Married life, first and foremost, conduces to comfort. It conduces to regular habits in sleeping and feeding; it promotes public morality, hygienic conditions and eliminates the risks attendant on promiscuous social indulgence.

"The bachelor is apt to become careless with regard to his health. But the wife makes it her first care to watch over her husband's health, and each man is married, he, too, takes greater care of himself that he may not fail in his duty to those toward whom he has responsibilities.

"Home life is one of the greatest ingredients of health. What married man does not look back with loathing to the interminable succession of meals taken in restaurants? What thought did he give to his diet?

"Not only physically, but also mentally, is this wifely companionship a boon. Are not most elderly bachelors and spinsters, too, unhappy? Very few bachelors of my acquaintance who have passed the age of fifty can honestly say that they are completely happy.

"My married friends of the same age, on the contrary, are mostly in full enjoyment of life, kept healthy and contented by their family interests."

"Celibacy, to me, is a new prescription for old age," says Sir Bruce Porter.

"I have met men who attributed their longevity to beer; others to teetotalism, others to cold baths; but this is the first time that I have ever heard any suggestion that bachelorhood led to old age.

"Day by day, with scalpel and microscope, we explore that strange and still uncharted continent, the human being. More and more, as our pilgrimage advances, do we realize the mingling of mind and matter.

"And marriage is a mental upheaval far greater than a physical one.

"It follows that the married man is a different being from the bachelor. He has a different mind, different interests, and this mental atmosphere reacts on his physical being.

"Perhaps married men of forty is not only more likely to live longer than a bachelor of the same age, but be is younger in himself. The great secret, of course, lies in his children.

"Men, containing two germs on their way through the ages, the germ of mind and the germ of the body, should pass them on as his means.

"After middle age he lives a great deal in the future."
